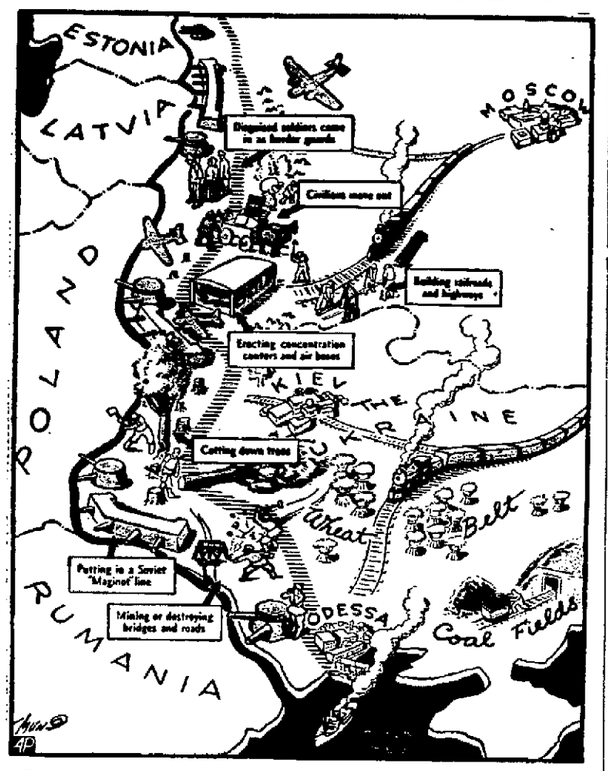
U.S., BRITAIN SPEED RE-ARMING

Soviets Build 'No Man's Land'



Russia is trying something new in the way of defenses against Germany, diplomats report. It's a No-Man's Land, ranging from a few to a hundred miles wide, along the border. In that strip trees are to be cut down—so that an invader will have no cover—and other preparations made against attack. The may gives an idea of what is to be done. Note that Germany is not a border country. Hitler, however, often has spoken and written of "the land to the east" and Germany's eastward expansion. Soviet alliances crumbled in the Czech crisis, so she looks to her guns along the broad, productive Ukraine, one of her richest possessions.

Man, Found After 48-Hour Search, Dies

THREE MAJOR CANDIDATES IN CITY THIS WEEK

Taft Addresses G. O. P. Rally Wednesday, Bulkley and Sawyer Due Saturday.

BIG WEEK OF CAMPAIGN

Two-District Meeting Will Bring Democrats From 10 Counties to City.

Richland county looked ahead today to what may develop into the biggest week of the fall political campaign with both candidates for U. S. senator and Charles Sawyer, Democratic candidate for governor, scheduled to speak at rallies here in the next few days.

First to appear will be Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati, candidate for senator on the Republican ticket, who will speak at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday at party headquarters on North Main street. Other district and county candidates will speak briefly at the rally.

Major Dem Rally.

Democrats from the Eighth and 17th congressional districts, representing 10 counties, will join in the party's major rally of the campaign Saturday afternoon and night in Mansfield.

Sawyer and Robert J. Bulkley, candidate for re-election to the U. S. senate, will be the principal speakers at the Democratic meetings which are expected to bring hundreds of Democrats from north central Ohio to Mansfield.

Speak at 2 Meetings.

They will talk at 1 p. m. at a session for women from the two congressional districts at the Mansfield-Leland hotel and at 7:30 p. m. at a two-district rally at Democratic headquarters on West Fourth street.

Sawyer, Taft and Bulkley spoke in Mansfield before the August primary election.

John W. Bricker, the Republican candidate for governor, who talked at a rally here about two weeks ago, went on record today as favoring the creation of a state board of education "to remove the state department of education from politics."

In a statement read by Mrs. Bricker at a meeting of school superintendents in Columbus, Bricker promised, if elected, that the state's obligations under the school foundation law "will be paid in cash."

With the foundation program more than $16,000,000 in debt, distribution of funds to Ohio schools have been made in authority to borrow for more than a year.

Both Sawyer and Bricker today announced labor endorsements from Cincinnati, Sawyer gaining the support of the Cincinnati Teamsters' Joint council No. 26 and Bricker receiving the endorsement of the Cincinnati Building Trades council. Both organizations are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Ruth Etting Blames Jealousy In Shooting

Radio Singer's Mate Shot By Ex-Husband Who Invaded Home.

(By Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES — Jealousy? — or self defense?—clashed as rival theories today to explain the shooting of singer Ruth Etting's new husband by her divorced mate and former business manager, Martin (Moe) Snyder.

Snyder, held in jail on suspicion of kidnaping and attempting to murder Myrl Alderman, 30-year-old bridegroom and radio musician, was curtly quoted by police as saying: "He was shooting at me, so I shot at him. Ruth won't prosecute me, because she still loves me."

But there was scant affection in Miss Etting's silver voice as she angrily blamed the gunplay in her luxurious home Saturday night on Snyder, whom she had divorced in Chicago last November after 17 years of wedded life.

'Won't Sing Again.'

"I don't believe I will ever sing again . . . ever," she said, sitting beside the hospital bed of Alderman, who secretly married her in Tijuana, Lower Calif., last July.

"Snyder was merely jealous. He's not satisfied unless he's making trouble. He's threatened to kill me before—and even telephoned from New York last January to threaten me.

"Snyder's story that Myrl shot at him is ridiculous. That boy never owned a gun. I did, though, one that I had for years. Snyder's gun was the only one there Saturday night until Myrl had been shot and was lying on the floor. Then I slipped into the bedroom and got mine.

"Snyder saw it. He took it away from me and threw it on the floor. Edith Snyder picked it up and shot at him—her own father. I believe that girl would lay down her life for me. Saturday night she almost did."

RUTH ETTING

Miss Snyder, Miss Etting's stepdaughter and secretary, concurred with the singer and Alderman's recital of events. This was:

That Singer, at pistol point, forced Alderman to drive him from a radio station to the Etting hillside home, where, in the music room, he threatened to shoot all three members of the household:

That Snyder shot twice at Alderman from a distance of 12 feet as the music arranger sat near Miss Etting on the piano bench. Alderman was struck once in the abdomen.

EX-FARMER HAD LAIN IN WEEDS FOR TWO DAYS

Aged Loudonville Resident Suffered Heart Attack While on Walk.

EXPOSURE PROVES FATAL

George Moerz, 69, Succumbs Few Hours After Being Discovered by Posse.

LOUDONVILLE — George Moerz, 69, who had been the object of a 48-hour search by residents, officers and Boy Scouts, and who was found early yesterday morning in a field of high weeds, died yesterday afternoon at Samaritan hospital in Ashland.

Posses were formed to search for Mr. Moerz Saturday after friends and relatives had been unsuccessful in their hunt Friday afternoon and evening. He had left the home of his sister, Mrs. Edward Frangkiser, with whom he lived, immediately after the noon meal Friday, to go for a walk. When he failed to return late in the afternoon, Mrs. Frangkiser became alarmed and authorities were asked to search for him.

Scouts Join In Search.

When he was still missing Saturday morning the aid of Boy Scouts was sought and citizens joined in the search.

Shortly after 7:30 a. m. Sunday Marshal Bert Conrad and Officer R. G. Schnittke found papers that had fallen from his pocket just outside the east corporation line of the town. A short distance away, along a deep ditch, they saw his feet sticking out of a growth of tall weeds.

Dies From Pneumonia.

Mr. Moerz was unconscious when found and was removed to Samaritan hospital at Ashland. Physicians said that he probably had suffered a heart attack while walking and had lain there since Friday afternoon. His death at 2 p. m. Sunday was attributed to pneumonia and exposure.

Mr. Moerz was a retired farmer and had resided in the vicinity of Loudonville all of his life. He was born May 17, 1869, the son of William and Lavina Moerz. His only immediate survivor is his sister, Mrs. Frangkiser.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. Tuesday at the Swank funeral home, with the Rev. J. H. Kuhlman, Zion Lutheran church, officiating. Burial will be in the Perrysville cemetery.

Car Blocks Traffic For 30 Miles

MACON, Mo.—(UP)—It was embarrassing, George Kogman said, his car acting up the way it did, but there wasn't much he could do about it.

Kogman, a carnival advance man was enroute here from Brookfield, Mo., the wheels on his old model automobile got the shimmies, and his brakes went bad. For 30 miles he kept eight trucks and more than 30 passenger cars behind him. Drivers said they were afraid to go around him.

State highway patrolmen finally stopped Kogman. Truck drivers parked their machines and started climbing out, threatening to beat Kogman for delaying them.

Officers kept the drivers off, brought Kogman to Macon and charged him with reckless driving.

LONDON SPURS DRIVE TO STOP DICTATORSHIPS

Churchill Makes Plea to U. S.; Chamberlain Calls Cabinet to Meet Tomorrow.

SHIFTS FOREIGN POLICY

Roosevelt Prepares to Ask Congress for Huge Peace-Time Arms Program.

(By International News Service)

Great Britain, planning a war-time cabinet in peacetime, aghast at the newly-exposed weakness of its defenses, and resigned to German expansion in the east, today entered, like the United states, an era of readjusted foreign policy and accelerated rearmament.

Tomorrow Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain will return to London to begin reorganization and expansion of his cabinet, necessitated by the new European outlook following the Munich agreement, of which he is at once the hero and scapegoat.

Seek Huge Arms Fund.

In Washington, the administration planned to ask congress for a huge appropriation that will raise the nation's commercial, civil and military aviation facilities to wartime strength.

On the eve of this unprecedented cabinet enlargement, British newspapers today printed the full text of Winston Churchill's powerfully-spoken appeal broadcast last night to the United States to align itself with Britain to halt the dictators "before it is too late." The broadcast was not heard in Britain.

"Will you wait," the war-time British defense minister asked America in a transatlantic broadcast, "until British freedom and independence have succumbed, and then take up the cause when it is three-quarters over, and take it up, as you will have to, when it is yours alone?"

Three new ministers, it is expected, will be created to deal with the British emergency and cope with the greatest rearmament drive in the empire's history.

These will be the ministers of national service, supply, and merchant shipping.

Eden Might Return.

Former foreign secretary Anthony Eden, who has recently tempered his outcries against Chamberlain, may return to the

City Hospital Wins Way to Top Rating

Placed On "Unconditionally Approved" List By American College of Surgeons; Gains By Improvements Made This Year.

Mansfield General hospital has been placed on the unconditionally approved list of hospitals by the American College of Surgeons, according to an announcement made in New York City this morning at the clinical congress of the college.

It is the first time in the Mansfield institution's history it has been given full and unconditional approval by the college, according to Superintendent A. O. Fonkalsrud.

For the past few years a rating of "conditionally approved" has been given to General hospital. Full approval was withheld in the past until certain conditions in the obstetric ward were met and a complete laboratory service provided.

New Equipment Added.

The new obstetric annex has been completed since the examiners were here last year, and the new X-ray equipment installed. The hiring of Dr. Henry Stiles, roentgenologist, and Dr. Burr Hathaway, patheologist, last July, brought the hospital up to the last demands required by the College of Surgeons, Dr. Fonkalsrud said today.

Among the 10 requirements for full approval is a modern plant, a competent and trained superintendent, adequate and efficient personnel, organized medical staff, adequate diagnostic and therapeutic facilities and a "humanitarian spirit, a primary consideration in the care of the patient."

Mansfield is one of 2,664 hospitals in the United States to be approved.

SHELBY YOUTH HELD IN SLAYING

Suspect in Nebraska Killing Disappeared From County 30 Days Ago.

Two youths, one of whom gave a Shelby address, were held by Nebraska police today in connection with the slaying of a companion aboard a freight train last week.

Associated Press dispatches said they gave their names as Donald Gallaway, 21, of Shelby, and Gary Ames, 14, of Wilmington, Mass.

The Shelby youth told authorities that his parents were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gallaway. This was confirmed by Police Chief Leroy Coffey who gave their address as 12 Grace street, Shelby. He said the youth had lived in Shelby until 30 days ago when he disappeared but that he had learned that Gallaway was in the midwest.

Eight weeks ago Gallaway served a term in jail for discharging firearms. Chief Coffey said the youth has a wife and baby believed to be living with her parents in Crestline.

County authorities at Kearney said the pair had confessed to beating, shooting and mutilation of a transient tentatively identified as H. A. Billings of Chicago. Billings' body, the dispatches said, was found beside the Union Pacific railroad tracks west of Kearney last Friday.

County Attorney Guy Henninger said that Gallaway admitter shooting the transient and that Ames confessed mutilating the body. Billings was shot after being beaten on the head with a large sugar beet, Henninger quoted the prisoners as saying.

N-J Scribe Finds Italy Really Likes Mussolini

Ashland Correspondent for News-Journal, On Tour of Old Country, Describes Native Reactions.

Two months spent in Italy and the island of Sicily have convinced Joseph Bonfiglio, jr., Ashland correspondent for The News-Journal, that the people of that nation really are "for" Benito Mussolini and that allegiance to him is not a matter of policy but inclination.

Bonfiglio, who was born in Ohio, has spent considerable time on his current trip abroad in Palmero, Sicily. He was in Italy, however, during the recent war scare and witnessed the demonstrations in honor of Il Duce after the agreement between the four major powers had been signed.

From the very beginning of the war fever, Bonfiglio wrote, the Italian people seemed willing to follow Mussolini to whatever fate he should take them, but when war was averted, they credited their leader with bringing it about and accorded him a new worship.

Finds Only Praise For Il Duce.

Bonfiglio wrote that "while it is true that Il Duce controls all of the newspapers and that they are constantly filled with his praises," he has talked with natives in taverns, private homes and in public places, and he finds them all of one mind.

"I do not know just what degree

OPEN CONGRESS

Catholic Leaders Hear Bishop in Attack on Communism.

NEW ORLEANS —(AP)—Catholic leaders of the nation gathered today for opening of the Eighth National Eucharistic congress while Bishop Joseph Schrembs, of Cleveland, in an interview blamed the "sad condition of the world" upon the influence of communism and of men "trying to grasp power."

The bishop expressed satisfaction, however, in the religious and political freedom enjoyed by Americans.

"In the so-called totalitarion state," said Bishop Schrembs, "the people are cogs in a machine without liberty or self-expression.

"I attribute the sad condition of the world which is living in a maze to the influence of communism and of men trying to grasp power and rule by force."

TWO INJURED IN TRAFFIC DIE

Little Washington and Shelby Men County's 18th, 19th Victims of Year.

Palmer, who was struck by an automobile near his home Oct. 6, died at 11:05 a. m. yesterday without regaining consciousness. Ruckman, who was injured Sept. 20 in a crash west of Mansfield, died nine minutes later.

Palmer suffered a skull fracture and fractures of his left leg when he was knocked down by a car driven by Glenn Hoffman of Shelby a short distance north of Little Washington. Authorities said Palmer, who lived with a brother, was nearly deaf and failed to hear the approaching machine as he walked along the road. Hoffman was not held.

Ruckman suffered a broken pelvis and internal injuries nearly a month ago in a collision in which his aged mother, Mrs. Sarah J. Ruckman, 77, was killed and Harry F. Spears of Wheeling, W. Va., was injured.

The four were arrested Sunday while taking pictures of Galeta Point, first defense of the Atlantic approach to the canal.

Teachers Predicted Bromfield Would Become Famous, Mansfielder Writes

Ohio State Student Tells How 'Bromfield Legend' Grows Each Year.

A Mansfield boy who is ambitious for a writing career is the author of a story published in yesterday's Columbus Dispatch, in which he writes of another Mansfielder, who has made good in the field of writing.

Louis Bromfield, native son of Mansfield, who is expected to return to Ohio sometime next month after a number of years in France, is the subject of an article written by George Sattler, 137 Parkwood boulevard, a senior in the school of journalism at Ohio State university. Sattler is circulation manager of The Lantern, the university paper, and also writes for it.

His story deals with the "Bromfield legend" as it increases year by year in Mansfield and has added a number of interesting stories to the legend.

He tells of how Mansfielders associate the city with certain townspeople with characters in the Bromfield novels.

As far back as Bromfield's high school days, some of his teachers predicted that he would become famous as a writer because of his passion for playing with words and ideas, and his unusual style of writing.

Sattler tells of some of the notes that Bromfield wrote to girl friends in high school, showing even then an imagination most unusual in a high school boy.

"They were clever and original notes," Sattler wrote, "with pictures of himself and the girl

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, October 18.

ALTHOUGH this may be heralded as a day of great enterprise and high promise, judging by the lunar transits, there may be a condition of stress and strife, with sudden visitations that are likely to upset all calculations. Strange persons or propositions may appear, bringing hazard to excellent prospects unless they are manipulated with much acumen as well as finesse. Superiors and those in authority may be consulted.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of some excellent opportunities for advancement, profit and expanding fortunes, with the definite support of employers, superiors or those in power. At the same time, there may be peculiar or unexpected propositions from strangers. These seem surrounded by jeopardy to all favorable enterprise unless managed with much tact, sagacity or stategy. Move slowly for safety.

A child born on this day may be adventurous, enterprising and ambitious, possibly with ideas too large for practical purposes. It may have over-expansive and exaggerated ideas of success in untrodden fields.

Youth Wants To Meet People

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My girl's mother wanted to rush us into matrimony, without having any nest egg put by for a rainy day. So we had to break up. The girl is now married to some one her mother thought she should take. But the girl thinks otherwise.

All this has put me in a very depressed state for the past year. Now I have a good position, but my hours make it almost impossible for me to have social contacts. I work from 4 o'clock in the afternoon till midnight. Have every Tuesday off, which gives me little chance to belong to clubs.

I'd really like to meet some nice girls. Am 23 and not bad looking.

A. C.

Why not consult the "Y" and see if they have any suggestions to make as to social contacts. If you will send me a self-addressed envelope, 3-cent stamped, I may be able to help you. There are several good clubs and schools in the city from which you write me.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've been going with a girl for about a year. While I'm very fond of her, I feel on account of my extreme youth, that I am not in a position to marry. She seems to be very much in love with me, and on the point of suggesting an engagement. Her mother I know, would be very pleased to have us marry. She is helping her daughter toward this end.

I've tried several times to break up with this young lady, but to no avail. She is so persistent.

DESPERATE ROMEO.

When a young man can't afford to marry, he should summon sufficient courage to tell the girl it is impossible. Much better to do this now than when he is swamped with bills and sees no way of paying them. Come out with the truth that you can't afford to marry, and it would be unfair to her to become engaged.

THEATER

Alice Brady, who won the Academy award this year for her character performance in "In Old Chicago," has been signed to play a role in "It's Spring Again," the first of the Oliver Hardy-Harry Langdon comedies. Which gives some idea of the radical change that there will be in the work of these two comedians. They're going to play "straight" comedy, according to their studio. Their first picture, now under way, is being made from the famous short story, "Zenobia's Infidelity."

* * *

Two-Fisted Hero.

Following his two-gunned, two-fisted roles in recent horse operas, Richard Arlen is right at home in the equine entertainment, "Straight, Place and Show," at the Madison. He is the apex of a romantic triangle in which he listens to the crooning music of Ethel Merman only because it reminds him of Phyllis Brooks. Comedy of the Ritz Brothers type is plentiful as they are the stars of the picture.

* * *

Newcomer at Ohio.

For his quick rise to recognition, Jeffrey Lynn has Errol Flynn's penchant for playing to thank. Flynn was slated for role in "Four Daughters" which Lynn plays, but he was away on a cruise on his yacht and when Warners sent for him, he refused to return. Lynn who had been spotted by talent scouts in the stage play of "Brother Rat," got the role. And the picture, with the Lane sisters, has whirled him upward on the movie ladder to fame.

* * *

Man of Many Faces.

Boris Karloff, who has assumed so many faces in the movies, puts on a new one for the series "Mr. Wong, Detective." He appears as a mild, rather gentle Chinese detective, most of his make up being done with his eyes and brows. The first story of the series deals with a murder in which the means of the crime cannot be found. "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" is the second feature at the Park.

* * *

Popular Aria Heard.

Hope Hampton, blond diva, who tried to make the movies years ago and gave it up to sing in opera, comes back in "Road to Reno," at the Majestic for the middle of the week. As a temperamental opera star she is co-starred with Randolph Scott, supported by Glenda Farrell, Helen Broderick, Alan Marshall and David Oliver. Her one aria is the lovely Musette waltz from "La Boheme." Also on the bill is "I Met My Love Again," with Joan Bennett and Henry Fonda.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"My dear Avis," I said loftily. "I am letting myself in for no unpleasantness whatever. I can see very clearly one of two things: Either you are in Philip Veritzen's employ and placed here by him to spy upon his son's wife, in which case you have failed him by permitting us to discover you, and you know how he punishes failure.

"Or," I went on relentlessly, "you are here strictly on your own, without Mr. Veritzen's sanction, in which case you have the status of any tramp, liable to arrest for trespass."

"The hotel authorities known I am here," she said after a pause. "That doesn't look as if I were trespassing. And how could I possibly get in here without Mr. Veritzen's authority? But before I answer any more questions, I'd like to know how long you are going to hold me down this way."

"Until we are sure you won't try to get away," I told her coolly. "But I fancy it will be safe to let you sit up in a chair. We'll carry her to that chair over there, Miss Whitlock." I indicated a big low armchair at my right.

"I'm the stronger to hold her," she said. "Will you get the strips?"

The face of the prisoned girl showed sudden panic.

"You promised you wouldn't gag me," she quavered.

"We're not going to gag you," I said. "But we are going to hobble your hands and feet, so you can't get very far if you should decide to try to get away from us before I am through with you."

"Will you fasten the strips or shall I?" I asked.

"You would better do it," she said. "I'm doing very well where I am."

"I'd hate to be either of you when you get caught up with over this," she said, and I reflected that she never had lacked courage of a certain sort. "Have you stopped to consider that I am expected downstairs at a certain time, and that when I do not arrive, they will begin to search for me?"

I confess that I had not thought of this particular contingency, and I had not framed a reply when a knock sounded upon the outer door. I saw Avis' lips part, patently in preparation for a scream, but Miss Whitlock clamped her hand over her mouth again

"I can handle her," she said grimly. "You'd better go into the other suite, and answer the knock from there, saying we are all in the big suite tonight."

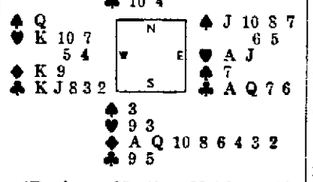
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHAT DECLARER HATES

One thing which a declarer usually hates to have you do is lead a suit which both he and your partner can ruff, your partner getting last whack at the trick. This enables your associate either to overruff or conserve a trump, an option which may mean the defeating of the contract.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

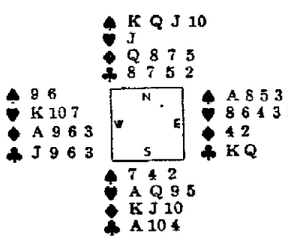
North passed as dealer on this hand and East bid 1-Spade. West called 2-Hearts. East 2-Spades and South 3-Diamonds. Neither opponent felt like proceeding further, so the contract was played there.

In response to his partner's bids, West led the Spade Q. When declarer won this with the K in dummy he immediately laid down the spade A, on which he threw the club 5. West ruffed with the diamond 9 and returned the club 2, which East won with the A. East continued with the club suit, leading the 6, which South ruffed. South then laid down the diamond A capturing West's K. The result was that he lost one club, two hearts and the trick ruffed by West, so that he made his contract.

When East was in with the club A, instead of returning a club, he should have led another spade, as if South held the A and K of diamonds he would have led two rounds instead of using the spade A for a discard in spite of the fact that East had bid the suit twice.

* * *

Tomorrow's Problem.



Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

Against bidding of 1-Heart by South, 1-Spade by North, 2-No Trump by South and 3-No Trump by North, why should West prefer leading clubs to diamonds!

Hours Under Hats Wreck Hair, Scalp

MME. QUI VIVE

When we have air conditioned hats there will be less sobbing about oily hair.

When tresses look as if they were larded three days after the shampoo, it is a safe guess that the difficulty is in the shampoo medium or insufficient rinsing. The least bit of soap left on the shafts will cause each thread to cuddle up to its neighbor and cling to the scalp. It is not easy to remove suds.

Soap must be melted, applied with vigorous message:—it must be removed with a spray that has a strong current of water. All through the shampoo the water should be fairly hot. Three latherings and as many risings are not too many when hair is inclined to be buttered.

* * *

Nervous, jittery girls have oily skins and oily glorious crowns. Less social activity, more poise, getting into the habit of taking things as they come without turmoil will have an advantageous effect upon the cutaneous structure and the brain mat. Diet must be considered as a factor. More green salads, vegetables and fruit juices will induce sebaceous glands to settle down and behave nicely. Heavy water drinkers are more likely to have normal scalps than the dry contingent.

Tonics to allay oiliness are effective.

A simple one is compounded of forty grains of resorcin, one ounce of alcohol, one ounce of witch hazel, one half ounce of water. Trickle it along partings with a medicine dropper, friction the scalp briskly. Brushing picks up the oil at the roots of the hair spreads it along the shafts. If you belong to the oilies, do your brushing the night before the shampoo.

Expert Gives Hints On Carving

By RUTH CHAMBERS

A roast, cooked to perfection and garnished artistically, is so appetizing, in appearance that it deserves to be brought to the table before it is carved. That, however, brings up the question, which is a bone of contention in some households, "Who is going to carve the roast?"

Perhaps the real question is, "How should it be carved?" It is usually lack of skill in going about this important task which makes it troublesome. You've noticed, perhaps, that a man who carves well is really pleased to assume this responsibility. It is only when he does not know quite how to go about it that he is apt to rebel.

Economy.

But no matter who does the carving, or where it is done, in kitchen or dining room, it is important that it be done skillfully. Meat can be served to better advantage when it is cut in neat, attractive slices. There is economy, too, in knowing how to get the greatest number of delicious servings from a piece of meat.

While practice brings facility in carving as in other tasks, you will succeed best if you understand the underlying principles It is necessary to know the position of the bones and the direction in which the fibers of the meat run in order to carve properly.

Carve Across Grain.

One of the basic rules of carving is to cut any piece of meat across the grain, in so far as this is possible. This cuts the long fibers and makes the meat more tender

Another important rule is to keep the same angle of the knife after the first incision is made This is the way to obtain neat, even slices

A good carving set is necessary to good carving. The knife should be kept sharp and it must be of good quality if it is to take and keep a keen edge An 8 or 9 inch carver is recommended for roasts, with fork and steel in proportion.

Here are the directions for carving the various familiar cuts so that they are most attractively served and the remnants are left in good condition for another dinner.

Standing.

To carve standing rib roast of beef, have the roast placed on the platter with the ends of the ribs to the left of the carver The rib ends may be decorated by paper frills, and in that case the carver steadies the roast by grasping the upper rib with his left hand. Otherwise he holds it steady by thrusting the fork into the center of the roast

To carve, cut very thin slices across the grain of the meat until the knife touches the bones. Carve several slices, then draw the point of the knife along the edge of the bone to separate the slices from the ribs.

Rolled Rib Roasts.

Place the roast cut side up on the platter Steady the meat by inserting the fork just below the slice that is to be next taken. Cut each of the cords which hold the roast as you reach it in carving. They keep the roast in shape while you are carving it. Loosen the cord after cutting it and let it fall on the platter, taking care that it does not touch the tablecloth.

Whole Ham.

The center slices of ham are the most desirable and should be served first. The problem is to get the largest number of attractive center clices.

Make the first incision at the large end with the knife just below the aitch or hip joint, and cut down to the bone. Cut parallel slices of even width, until the center section of the ham has been cut. Then run the knife along the bone, releasing the half slices. Steady the ham, while carving, with the fork. For more servings, turn the ham over and carve the other side in like manner.

Leg of Lamb.

A leg of lamb is carved like at ham, for the bone structure of the two cuts are similar. The best way is to cut down through the center portion of the leg, perpendicular to the large bone.After sufficient number of slices have been cut, run the knife along the bone to release the slices, just as you did in carving ham. Turn and carve the other side in like manner.

Stuffed Cubed Steaks New Dish

CUBED STEAK CASSEROLE—Four cubed steaks, 1 pound; ¼ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper; 2 tablespoons flour; 1 cup soft bread crumbs; ¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning; 1 teaspoon onion, minced, 2 tablespoons butter, melted; 2 tablespoons water; ⅓ cup uncooked rice; 2½ cups canned tomatoes (No. 2 can); ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter. Wipe steaks with a damp cloth, roll in the mixture of salt, pepper and flour. Make a dressing of crumbs, poultry seasoning, onion, butter and water. Lay each steak down, cut side up; on it place a quarter of the dressing. Fold each steak over its dressing and fasten with skewers, tooth picks, or string to form compact portions. Put the flour stuffed steaks into a greased, shallow heat-resistant glass casserole, one quart size. Wash rice, place it around the meat rolls, pour tomatoes over all and add salt and bits of butter. Cover the casserole and bake in a moderate oven for an hour or until the steaks are tender and the rice is done.

Kitchen Hints

Here is a recipe for a popular peppermint ice cream. Soak for half an hour, one-third of a pound of peppermint stick candy and one cup of cream. Fold in one cup of whipped cream and freeze four hours in the mechanical refrigerator. Or cover securely in mold and bury four hours in five parts of chopped ice and one part coarse salt.

When buying bone roasts, be sure the butcher sends you the bones even if they have been removed. The bones can be used for making soups and stock for stews.

Casserole Meals Solve Problem Of Last Minute Dinners

By MRS ALEXANDER GEORGE
(AP Service Feature Writer)

You don't have to have that 5:30 kitchen rush every day in the week. You can have dinner ready to pop into the oven when the family gets home In a half an hour or so it will be ready to eat.

The secret, if you haven't surmised, is the casserole, or meal-in-one-dish, dinner. It fills a hungry family. And besides saving your time it also conserves fuel and is easy on the budget. One more advantage—it's an appetizing way to sell your family on left-overs.

Everything At Once.

For instance, you can mix diced cooked meats, green beans and celery and cover them with left-over potatoes, thinned with gravy or cream, to form a new kind of crust.

Another simple trick is to cover cooked ham or pork and sliced apples or crushed pineapple with a sweet-potato topping. Merely blend the left-over sweet potatoes with some cream and a small amount of butter.

The big idea in serving a casserole dinner is to plan a menu of foods that can all be cooked at the same time. Figure on a baked fruit sauce of some kind, a crispy hot bread and a dessert like cottage or bread pudding or gingerbread.

Here's hurry-up casserole stunt: Open two medium-sized cans of baked beans, add a little warm water and spread a three-inch layer in shallow, buttered casserole. Add some chili sauce or catsup for extra flavor, if you like. Then lay strips of bacon, small sausage links or thinly cut pork chops over the beans. Cover the dish and bake 20 minutes. Uncover it then and bake it 15 minutes more to brown it well. Fill up the oven with bran muffins and cook some raisin-stuffed apples for dessert.

Fish Combination.

Fish casseroles are hard to beat. Use salmon (or any favorite fish) and hard-cooked eggs. Add the fish to a savory cream sauce and pour into shallow baking dish. Top with halves of eggs, open sides up. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake about 20 minutes. Corn muffins, and butterscotch or upside-down pudding are good oven combinations for this dish.

Left-over meat, cut into one-inch pieces, added to well seasoned tomato sauce and cooked noodles, rice or macaroni makes a grand dish when cooked 20 minutes in buttered baking dish.

Shape chopped raw meat, seasoned with parsley, onion, celery salt, salt and paprika, into two-inch balls. Roll in flour and brown in a small quantity of fat. Also brown some boiled rice in the same fat. Add gravy or milk to cover and cook two minutes. Transfer to a buttered casserole dish and bake 20 minutes.

Set the children to blowing soap bubbles on your next rainy day A little glycerine added to warm soapy water will increase the size and number of the bubbles.

Cooked mushrooms, diced and mixed with chopped cooked browned bacon, salad dressing and a little minced onion, make a delicious filling for hot buttered toast sandwiches.

"I'LL TAKE 5½ KILOWATT HOURS TODAY!"

Electric service is a pretty carefree service. Suppose that tomorrow morning you had to sit down with pencil and paper and say to yourself, "now let's see, I'm going to wash the clothes and vacuum clean the rugs. Mother will be over for lunch and she likes waffles. Then Bill wants a roast for supper and after supper I want to finish that story. So we'll need about five and one-half kilowatt hours of electricity today." That would be a nuisance, wouldn't it? Not only that, but the Jones' might drop in for an evening at cards, and you would have to telephone an emergency call for more electricity for lights. Fortunately you don't have to do that. All you have to do is flick a switch, or plug in the electrical appliance you wish to use. And you have as little or as much electricity right there, instantly, for the service you desire. And I hope you won't forget that it takes a lot of human beings like yourself and a lot of equipment behind that light switch, or convenience outlet, to make that service possible. Yet please remember that the electric service bill is the SMALLEST item on the average family's annual budget So use it freely . . . because ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP.

What sort of story do your hands tell? Does their red roughness reveal hard work that doesn't belong in the category of modern household duties? Shoveling, for instance, and chopping kindling, too. These burdensome tasks of out-moded furnace methods make it difficult to keep your hands soft and lovely, your disposition sweet and happy. But you needn't put up with them another winter, if you'll install automatic gas heat. And the best part of it, the cost of gas heat is surprisingly reasonable. It costs no more than the fuel and incidental expenses of some old-fashioned method. Get a free heating survey made of your home at once. Lawyers Join Attack on Appointive Judiciary Plan

LINE UP WITH LABOR AS FOES OF AMENDMENT

Former Supreme Court Justice Among Legal Profession's Opponents of Measure.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Lawyers who disagree with the stand of the Ohio State Bar association in support of the appointive judiciary amendment to the Ohio constitution were lined up today with organized labor in a campaign to oppose the amendment.

More than 800 delegates, mostly from labor unions, with a sprinkling of lawyers and others attended a meeting of the Ohio league to preserve democracy and the elective judiciary here.

Carrington T. Marshall, former chief justice of the Ohio supreme court, was cheered when he volunteered to go on the radio in opposition to the proposal.

Backing of both branches of organized labor for the anti-amendment campaign was promised by Secretary Thomas J. Donnelly of the state federation of labor and President John Owens of the Ohio committee for industrial organization.

Judge Adds Opposition.

Judge Stanley Struble, of Cincinnati, said the amendment, substituting a modified plan of appointment for election in the case of judges of the supreme and appellate courts, "would put the judiciary in the hands of the legal profession."

"It is part of a lawyer's movement but the rank and file are against it," he asserted.

U. S. Sen. Robert J. Bulkley sent a telegram saying the proposed amendment is "neither democratic nor necessary."

Under the proposed amendment, judges of the higher courts would be appointed for six-year-terms by the governor from nominations made by the judicial council. At the end of this term, each judge would have to go before the voters for a decision whether he should continue in office for six years more.

MAILS OUT FOLDERS

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Secretary of State William J. Kennedy mailed to Ohio voters today the first of 1,000,000 folders containing pro and con arguments on the proposed constitutional amendment to make supreme court and court of appeals judgeships appointive instead of elective.

Police Look for Capacity Crowd at Ball Tonight

The evening's festivities will begin at 9 p. m. with a grand march headed by Chief Bates and other members of the police department.

Ace Brigode and his Virginians, nationally known dance band, heard regularly over radio station WLW, Cincinnati, and the Mutual broadcasting system, will play for dancing from 9 p. m. until 1 a. m.

Proceeds of the ball, sponsored by the Police Recreation club, will be used to purchase equipment for the police department including the annual supply of ammunition for target practice.

DOCTOR FINED

Arraigned in municipal court today on a charge of disorderly conduct Dr. Wayne E. Young, 27 East Second street, pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs.

Three Sea Scout officials, accompanied by nine Sea Scouts, took advantage of the good sailing weather over the week-end to make a 70-mile sailboat ride among the islands in Lake Erie. The trip was made in the 35-foot boat "Miriam," owned by Paul R. Tappan. Leaving Vermilion Saturday afternoon they sailed to Kelley's island, spent the night at Sandusky, and then went to Put-in-Bay yesterday. Accompanying Tappan and the scouts were Wesley G. Carr of the Sea Scout committee, and Clifford Hartnett, commander of the Sea Scout troop.

Dr. Oaks, who has been a student flier for some time, made his first solo flight yesterday at Mansfield airport, and received a grade of 100 per cent from his teacher, "Bud" Harrington. Mrs. Oaks has become so interested in flying that she is now a pupil herself and is looking forward to the day when she will take a plane up by herself.

Think nothing of it if you see boys and girls armed with nets running like mad along the highways and in pasture fields near the city. They are Senior high school pupils in pursuit of 30 bugs of various species and sizes to turn into their biology teacher by Thursday. The insect-catching youngsters not only present a strange sight, but they cause mothers no little anxiety. They never know when they will find a grasshopper or a beetle hiding under the table cloth or scampering across the rug.

When it comes to selling tickets, Patrolman George F. Yoakum doesn't have to take lessons from anybody. For the third successive year he led his fellow officers in the dispensing of ducats for the annual Police ball. A program and tea followed, with LeMoine Derr singing and Sigurd Jorgensen playing several violin numbers, with Mrs. Fred Cahall at the piano.

Bellville teachers who were guests at the meeting were Mrs. Martha Cline, Mrs. Yeager and Miss Morten.

WIFE JAILED IN MATE'S MURDER

Husband, Former Assistant Prosecutor, Killed After Quarrel at Home.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich.—Mrs. Patricia Holbrook, 34, shot and killed her husband, William, 42, former assistant prosecuting attorney, in front of the Benton Harbor police station early today, two minutes after she had been released from custody. Holbrook had asked police a few minutes before to "hold her awhile so she can't bother me."

Special Policeman Pugh witnessed the shooting. He and another officer seized Mrs. Holbrook and took her back into the station.

She refused to answer questions.

"My mind was a blank," she said.

Desk Sergeant Eugene Murphy, alone in the station at the time of the shooting, said Holbrook and his wife had quarreled at their home until early today over a visit Holbrook had made to his former wife and their two sons.

"Holbrook left intending to go to a hotel," Murphy said. His wife followed him and he came here. He was telling me about the quarrel when she came in."

About two minutes after Holbrook had gone, Murphy told Mrs. Holbrook she could leave.

She hurried out of the station, caught up with her husband, drew a small, four-shot Derringer from her handbag and fired two shots, hitting him in the shoulder. Then she fired two more shots, both of which struck him in the head.

FOUND DEAD IN ROOMING HOUSE

Ed Angus, 40, Stricken Few Hours After Telling of Feeling Good.

Ed Angus, about 40, a resident of this city for only a few weeks, was found dead in his room, 142 East Luther place, at 5:30 a. m. today. He was discovered when George Visi, another roomer, called him for work.

Death was caused by a heart attack, according to Coroner Hugh Winbigler. He had been dead about two hours when found. Police were told he had complained Sunday afternoon of feeling ill and had gone to his room. He was employed at the Kearns Packing company.

The body was removed to the Jones funeral home, where it will remain until relatives in Kansas City are located by police.

JURIST POINTS TO NEED HERE OF DOMESTIC RELATIONS COURT

A domestic relations court for Richland county was urged last night by Municipal Julge Julius Kovachy of Cleveland in a talk at the Community Christian Youth Forum at the First Presbyterian church.

"The court should handle juvenile delinquent cases as a part of its program," Judge Kovachy said, "since the probate court, because of its wide program, should not be expected to carry the additional burden of dealing with juvenile delinquents."

Both Probate Judge C. J. Anderson and Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston of Richland county have advocated the establishing of a domestic relations court here to deal with the increasing number of juvenile cases. The county's juvenile department is a part of Judge Anderson's probate court.

Judge Anderson has pointed out that the work of his probate court leaves too little time to deal with child offenders.

"It is more sensible to prevent crime than to devote our entire attention to the imprisonment of criminals," Judge Kovachy said last night. He added that "the function of the court is to consider the welfare of the community first and then the individual criminal."

Describing the work of the crime prevention division of the Cleveland police department, Judge Kovachy said "the need today is for an adequate study of the moral and social environment of the community."

The devotional service last night was conducted by Rev. D. N. Roller, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Janet Kelly presided during the forum program.

The Senior high school band presented a concert under the direction of J. Merton Holcombe, instructor of music at the high school, and Willis Wygant, jr.

Next week's youth forum will be held at the Park Avenue Baptist church with Dr W. E. Wygant and Dr. D. D. Deeds heading a discussion of "What Is Social Hygiene?"

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

CALLS SOLDIERS AS ALARM OVER UPRISING GROWS

5,000 Troops Mobilized While War Department Acts to Halt Rebellion.

(By International News Service)

MEXICO CITY—Five thousand soldiers were mobilized today for possible duty in Sonora, where a farmers' army was reported in open revolt—Mexico's second rebellion this year.

What the war department described as the "gravest situation" in Mexico since Gen. Saturnino Cedillo's abortive uprising last May came with a quarrel between Governor Roman Yocupicio of Sonora and Gen. Jose Tapolla Caballero, military commander of the Pacific coast state.

General Blamed.

"After gathering detailed information," Gov. Yocupicio wired to President Lazaro Cardenas, "I am convinced that the Agrarians have been used as the instrument of trouble.

"They have invaded the Yaqui valley and are in open rebellion. Gen. Tapolla is directly responsible for this situation."

Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, war minister, rushed to Hermosillo, capital of the state, about 160 miles south of Nogales, Ariz. Gov. Yocupicio established military headquarters in the extreme south of Sonora, at Navajoa.

President Cardenas summoned Gen. Tapolla to Mexico City.

Gen. Avila Camacho was prepared to take direct command of the federal forces in Sonora, it was stated at the war department, but he will try to mediate between Yocupicio and Tapolla.

Gen. Gustabo Leon, veteran of former uprisings, took command of a squadron of planes at Hermosillo.

The quarrel is apparently bound up with labor disputes and the federal government's land program.

Vicente Lombardo Toledano, head of the confederation of Mexican workers, with 1,000,000 members, issued a statement blaming the situation on Gov. Yocupicio:

"The authorities of the state of Sonora have impeded administration of the Agrarian law by using violence," he asserted

FAIR ENOUGH!

Those Who Feel Selves Wronged Naturally Are Ready to Put Up Fight

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—As a newspaperman, I know that a given event, occurring under one set of circumstances and involving certain persons, may constitute news, whereas the same happening is worthless if it occurs elsewhere with other principals.

This is a very pompous way of questioning the actual importance of trivial spats between toss-pot celebrities in the night clubs of our city. But I just want to get started. Then I can relax.

One night I happened to see a man punching another man in the face in a famous saloon, but thought nothing of it, for, after all, fights in saloons are routine and usually are very poor fights, consisting more of bad language than punching.

But the next morning this fight blossomed into news matter of first importance, on the ground that Johnny Weissmuller, the greatest moving picture actor of all time, had had something to say in the preliminary wordage. Mr. Weissmuller distinctly did not punch anybody. I saw that much.

Moreover, it was a poor victory for the winner, because two waiters held the loser by his arms, trying to stop the contest to save the spectators further punishment. With this advantage, the conqueror bounced lefts and rights off the man's undefended chin, but without causing his knees to sag. Indeed, the man walked briskly to his corner as the round ended.

* * *

This may have been bad publicity for Mr. Weissmuller, who was neither drunk nor disorderly, but his blameless involvement in some repartee which had preceded the slapping imparted to an unimportant flurry a quality which publicized the occurrence all over the United States, and perhaps abroad.

Even if Mr. Weissmuller had been one of the principals, I still would challenge the importance of the cruel struggle, unless the other man had killed Mr. Weissmuller, whose demise, naturally, would be news. I am not that indifferent to news values.

Should Mr. Weissmuller cease to be, from whatever cause, I should demand prominent play for the story under some such head as "World's Greatest Moving Picture Actor Ceases to Be." Maybe that wouldn't fit in type, but it will convey the idea. I never had any experience writing heads, being a press association man.

Fights occur every night in saloons on Third avenue, in Brooklyn, at formal dinners in Washington and in roadside jooks in the south and west, and ladies who feel themselves to have been wronged, one way or another, claw their initials in the features of faithless two-timers without the faintest ripple of publicity.

* * *

Pehhaps the bartender reaches over with his gavel and pats the aggressor on the gong to bring him to his senses, or the waiters surround the contestants and give them the heave into the night. Or the proprietor, preferring guile to violence, persuades the contestants to have one drink together on the house by way of pledging peace and gives them each a portion of that Mickey Finn—a saloon fighter who has yet to meet his equal.

Anyway, they call names, scratch and push, and the ladies, being delicate and high strung, sometimes shriek a few bars, but never a word of all this do we see in the papers.

At this point I remember seeing much art and reading matter a few days later concerning a spat between a theatrical lady and a foreign prize fighter which smelled of publicity from the very start, and proved to be just that on further inquiry.

I propose that if we are going to cover the subject, we establish a small column under the head, "Last Night's Saloon Fights," and list all the fights at all the saloons, and that anything less than a public-spirited killing be otherwise ignored.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—This will be good news—and bad—for the parents of child prodigies who ought to be in pictures: There's a producer who is turning over his entire studio to the production of "kid pictures," and nothing but.

"A little child shall feed them," said Sol Lesser today, looking around the lot where his staff of workers was making ready for another Tommy Kelly starrer called "Wings of Tomorrow."

He meant, however, several little children—but not too many, and therein lies the bad news. Because he says:

"The market for child stars has reached the saturation point in Hollywood today. There are enough. A child would have to be really different to get somewhere in pictures today against the competition already here. And I mean different.

"Every day we get letters from parents who claim that their own child is a second Shirley Temple, better than Jane Withers, a finer singer than Bobby Breen, tougher than Mickey Rooney, and so on. None of that interests us."

* * *

"Dear Mr. Lesser, In our house there is a brat. He is a moral backslider, a thief, disobedient, impudent, and I'm sure he'll come to no good. For all that, he has a personality that makes us love him, regardless. He will probably wind up in the electric chair, but we've been thinking he might as well earn a few shekels for our old age before he reaches the hot seat. If you want to take the risk, and give him a test, you're welcome. But understand, it's YOUR risk, and if he comes to see you be sure everything of value in your studio is nailed down."

Well, Lesser isn't looking for embryo gangsters, but you'll get the idea. He doesn't want carbon copies of kids already on the screen.

Lesser's been making pictures since that day, as a San Francisco film distributor, he was invited to make a commercial reel for a drugstore chain. He made it, and probably should be hanged, as the perpetrator of that current school of salesmanship which teaches salesmen not to let a customer get away until he's bought ten other articles in addition to the pack of cigarets he really wanted. Anyway, that reel convinced him he was a producer, and he followed it up with a spot-news feature on the fall of the Barbary Coast and another starring Annette Kellerman, called "What Women Love."

* * *

Jackie Cooper in "Peck's Bad Boy" was one of his biggest hits and through the years the child star consistently scored for Lesser.

That's why today he is concentrating on them exclusively. From now on, he will exploit Tommy Kelly, Bobby Breen, Ann Gillis and the little skater Irene Dare—in pictures with appeal for adults as well as children.

"You can't succeed with a picture that doesn't interest adults, no matter how many children you use," he said today.

And Lesser is one of the two producers in Hollywood who HAS to succeed. The other is Samuel Goldwyn. Those two are the only ones who gamble their own money on their pictures!

Two Share Coast Spotlight

By HERBERT W. BARKER

NEW YORK—(AP)—After a close survey of the week-end wreckage, it can be stated definitely that of the 30 major football teams still undefeated, Minnesota's Gophers will not be beaten this week. They don't play. Nothing else can be guaranteed—not after a week which saw 20 big-time outfits bite the dust for the first time, including such prime favorites as Cornell, Navy, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Holy Cross, Alabama and Oregon.

Herbert W. Barker

Subject to change without notice, the chief powerhouses right now appear to be Pitt and Dartmouth in the east; Minnesota and Notre Dame in the midwest; Texas Christian, Baylor, Oklahoma and Texas Tech in the southwest; California and Santa Clara on the Pacific slope, and Tennessee, Vanderbilt and Duke on the south.

This week's program, outlined below, may change the situation completely by this time next week.

EAST: The intersectional angle is strongly stressed in the middle sector. Pitt, which overpowered hitherto unbeaten Wisconsin, 26-6, meets Southern Methodist, already beaten by Marquette. Yale, led to a sensational 9-7 upset victory over Navy by Gil Humphrey, takes its stand against powerful Michigan which bowed to Minnesota, 7-6. Fordham, tied by Purdue's closing rush, 6-6, meets Oregon's Webfoots who suffered their first defeat in a 27-16 rout by Stanford.

Holy Cross, whose first defeat since 1936 was a 7-6 loss to Carnegie Tech, tackles unbeaten Georgia; Villanova's perfect record will be at stake against Detroit; Duquesne plays Mississippi State, which suffered its initial loss to Auburn, 20-6.

On the purely sectional side, Boston College, which beat Detroit 9-6 last week, plays Temple which routed previously unbeaten Bucknell, 26-0. Dartmouth, whose second half rush buried Brown, 34-13, meets a courageous Harvard outfit which finally surrendered to Army, 20-17. Georgetown plays Manhattan. George Washington, after beating Colorado, 19-0, returns home to face Davis & Elkins.

Penn, tripped by Princeton, 19-0, and Columbia, stopped by Colgate, 12-0, clash at Philadelphia. Cornell, beaten by undefeated Syracuse, 19-17, will try to start again against Penn State. Navy and Princeton get together at Baltimore as New York University, nosed out by North Carolina, plays Lafayette. Army eases off against Boston university.

* * * * *

Undefeated Tech Meets Undefeated Notre Dame.

MIDDLE WEST: The only major game of the entire national slate which involves two undefeated and untied teams sends Carnegie Tech against Notre Dame, 14-6 conqueror of Illinois. Syracuse may find a tartar in Michigan State which routed West Virginia 26-0. Colgate plays Iowa. Texas Christian's Horned Frogs, who rolled over Texas A. and M., 34-6, meet Marquette at Creighton and West Virginia takes on Omaha.

The Big Ten program is headed by a clash between Illinois and Northwestern, whose Wildcats played Ohio State to a scoreless draw. Purdue meets Wisconsin and Ohio State works out with Chicago in other conference games. Indiana, tied by Nebraska, 0-0, plays Kansas State, good enough to whip Marquette last week, 6-0.

In the Big Six, Iowa State's Cyclones, who tripped Missouri, 16-13 for their second straight conference win, seek another against Kansas, beaten soundly by undefeated Oklahoma, 19-0. Oklahoma, meanwhile, will be playing Nebraska.

SOUTH: Southeastern conference warfare finds Alabama, 13-0 victim of Tennessee's Vols, playing hapless Sewanee. Georgia Tech, nipped 6-0 by Duke, meets Auburn, and Vanderbilt, whose fourth quarter rally stopped Mississippi, 13-7, tangles with Louisiana State. Unbeaten Tennessee has a "breather" with the Citadel.

A heavy Southern conference finds two leaders, Duke and North Carolina, arrayed against Wake Forest and Davidson, respectively. Virginia Military plays William and Mary. Other conference pairings are Clemson and South Carolina, North Carolina State and Furman, Washington and Lee and Virginia Tech.

SOUTHWEST: Rice, whose third successive defeat was a 26-17 shellacking by Tulane, begins conference competition against Texas, shelled 42-6 by Arkansas. Baylor, 14-0 conqueror of Centenary, plays Texas Aggies.

* * * * *

Stanford-U. S. C. Game Heads Pacific Card.

FAR WEST: Stanford and Southern California, who share the lead with California, collide at Palo Alto. The Cardinals' upset victory over Oregon may make them favorites over Southern California which had its troubles running up a 19-6 count on Washington State, now four-times beaten. California, which whipped U. C. L. A., 20-17, plays Washington, beaten surprisingly by Oregon State, 13-6. U. C. L. A. must meet the unbeaten Independent, Idaho.

Undefeated Santa Clara plays Arkansas and unbeaten but tied San Francisco draws St. Mary's Gaels as its next test.

Bears, Indians Top Pro Loop

Former Team Gets Another Crack at Rams Sunday.

CHICAGO — (AP) — Chicago's Bears and Washington's Redskins remained atop their respective sections of the National Professional Football league today—the Bears after the loop's biggest touchdown spree yesterday and the defending champions after the low scoring game of the day.

Both leaders, narrowly averting defeat yesterday, face stiff opposition in next Sunday's games. The Bears will entertain Cleveland; Philadelphia goes to Washington. The Rams, in fourth place, gave the western division leaders their only setback in five games.

Philadelphia holds the No. 4 spot in the eastern section, but the Eagles gave the Redskins a merry inaugural before bowing, 26 to 23.

In the week's other games, Pittsburgh will play at Green Bay, which crushed Brooklyn yesterday, 35 to 7. Brooklyn will go to New York, where the Giants won a game of fumbles from Philadelphia 17 to 7. The revived and revamped Chicago Cardinals, who outgained the Bears in every department yesterday but lost the scoring end 34 to 28, will face Detroit which succumbed before Washington 7 to 5.

Suffers Fourth Straight Defeat

Kallmerten & Baer Semi-pro Eleven Bows to Rossford, 13 to 6, Before Small Crowd.

By CHARLES MARTIN

THE Kallmerten and Baer semi-pro gridsters were still looking forward today to registering their initial victory of the season.

The Mansfield eleven Sunday bowed to the touted Rossford Merchants, 13 to 6, before a small gathering at League park. It was the fourth straight defeat.

Rossford, seeking to score its first triumph over a Mansfield semi-pro outfit, turned on the fireworks yesterday in the opening half to tally both touchdowns. Previous to the melee, Rossford and Mansfield had played three tie games.

A brilliant passing attack in the first two periods paved the way for both scores.

Score on Long March.

The Coals pushed over their lone marker in the second chapter on a spectacular 85-yard march, but were unable to get their touchdown machine clicking after that drive.

Jay Losonski and Peer were the principal Rossford threats, both playing major roles in the team's two scores.

Losonski tallied the opening touchdown, plunging over from the three, after Peer's two beautiful passes to Martin had carried the ball from the Rossford 15 to the Mansfield 14. Losonski added the only extra point of the game with a perfect drop kick.

Mansfield came back strong in the second chapter after halting a Merchant threat on its own two. An exchange of punts gave the K-B's the ball on its 15, and with "Rabbit" Siler and Bill Hall carrying the ball, the club moved down to the three and Siler climaxed the drive on a sweep.

A penalty cost the Coals an opportunity of tying the score at 7-all after Gil Weigand had ploughed through the line. Hall attempted a placement from the 18, but the Rossford forward wall blocked it.

It looked as though the half would end with the Merchants holding a slim 7 to 6 advantage, but, with seconds to play, Peer rifled a pass from his own 45 to Durco, who raced the remaining 20 yards for a score as the gun cracked.

The Merchants recovered a Mansfield fumble in the fading minutes of the final period on the Coals' 20, but Vern Heiser stopped the threat on the next play when he intercepted a forward.

Short of Mark.

Losonski gave the spectators a thrill in the second period when he attempted to drop kick a field goal from the Mansfield 30. The kick was hurried by the rugged K-B line and was short of its mark.

Mansfield chalked up eight first downs to Rossford's six.

Bucks Look Forward To First 'Breather'

Hope to Develop Scoring Punch Sadly Missing Against Three Foes in Chicago Game.

COLUMBUS—The 1938 Ohio State football forces, powered chiefly by sophomores and juniors, looked forward today with eagerness to two potential "breather" games on the next two week-ends as opportunities to develop the scoring punch sadly missing against three strong opening foes.

With an attack that tallied only two touchdowns, the Bucks emerged from successive encounters against Indiana, Southern California and Northwestern with no worse than one defeat and with an undefeated Big Ten record.

The Scarlet and Gray gladly settled for a scoreless tie Saturday against the Wildcats, secure in the knowledge that Minnesota and Wisconsin, the only two remaining teams undefeated in the conference whom the Bucks do not play, have one less scheduled league game.

Holds Edge in Race.

Ohio State, meeting six Big Ten opponents, possessed a mathematical edge in the event all clubs should drop one or more games although any championship talk around Ohio stadium was submerged by the need for more touchdowns.

As on previous occasions, the Bucks revealed a definite improvement against Northwestern over their performance of the week before. The Ohio State forward wall, pushed around for the first half, throttled the fast-charging veteran Wildcat line and backs in the critical moments and grew stronger as the game progressed. Co-Captain Carl Kaplanoff, giant tackle, and End Keith Bliss were outstanding.

The Ohio State ball carriers and passers showed improvement but lacked the vital punch when scoring chances presented themselves. Sophomore Jim Straus-baugh pushed into the limelight with a spectacular 57-yard dash in the third quarter that was the turning point in the ball game.

Strausbaugh's run placed the Bucks on the Wildcat 30-yard line and enabled them to dominate the play for the remainder of the game. A fumble and a missed field goal spoiled their chances to score, however. Fullback Jim Langhurst, Quarterback Bill Bullock and Center Claude White, the last two being reserves, turned in stellar work that raised their stock as preparations opened for the remaining five games.

Coach Francis Schmidt today excused the regulars from practice as he sought that missing punch for experimentation on Chicago next Saturday in Ohio stadium, and New York university one week later.

Michigan on Rise.

From other fronts Michigan's esurgence in Big Ten football appeared very definitely as "The McCoy."

If there's such a thing as being glorious in defeat, that's exactly what Michigan was Saturday when it bowed 7-6 to the best thing in the Big Ten—Minnesota. Michigan humiliated the Gophers in every way except the final score, which, of course, is what counts.

Minnesota gets a well-earned rest this week-end. Michigan invades New Haven to renew an ancient rivalry with Yale and somebody should warn the Elis that the Wolverines, who hadn't been going anywhere since 1933, are headed up!

Iowa was supposed to score its first Big Ten triumph since 1935 and did—a 27-14 victory over Chicago, which still is seeking its first Big Ten victory since 1936.

Tackle Sturdy Foe Saturday

Murphy's Men Play Poorly As Mansfield Suffers Worst Defeat In 18 Years At Sandusky.

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

LIMP and sore from the worst battering absorbed by a Mansfield high school gridiron club in 18 years, Coach Russ Murphy's Tygers today turned to the task of rebuilding their morale for what appears to be one of the toughest assignments remaining on their schedule.

Mansfield goes over to Skiles field Saturday to engage Shelby's rampant Whippets, and Tyger victory hopes never appeared darker in the series with the Bordertown in 10 years than they do this week-end.

Boasting a perfect defensive record, Shelby's undefeated grid warriors may not rank on a par with Massillon, Canton McKinley or Sandusky, but they form one of the strongest Whippet teams assembled in recent years as the Tygers may learn to their sorrow Saturday.

Paced by Harold Bliss, 170 pounds of human dynamite, Shelby has registered five straight victories with only a minimum of effort, and Mansfield has not produced a brand of football in any of its appearances this season that appears potent enough to halt the march of Coach Bill Query's men.

Mansfield football fortunes struck a new low Saturday over in Sandusky where the Tygers took it on the chin to the tune of 45 to 0. It was the worst defeat suffered by a Mansfield team since 1920 when Cookie Cunningham and Brownie Corcoran paced Mt. Vernon to a 59 to 0 triumph.

Only one other defeat worse than Saturday's has been experienced by Mansfield representatives in the last 25 falls. That came 'way back in 1913 when Toledo Waite licked a team that included the great Pete Henry, 88 to 0.

It was the poorest exhibition of football ever presented by a team coached by Murphy, who was probably more disappointed over the whipping administered his proteges than the most avid Mansfield fan.

* * *

Invade Sandusky Territory Once.

THE Tygers were thrust back in their own end of the gridiron on the opening kickoff, and they remained there the entire game except for a moment late in the fourth quarter when they reached Sandusky's 47 against a reserve Blue Streak lineup.

Mansfield teams have been beaten by the margin of several touchdowns before, but never so decisively.

Erratic punting, ineffective blocking, listless tackling and plain and fancy fumbling marked the pitiful Mansfield performance.

Bad punting by Capt. Rich Nagle and Al Schwaner set up five of the seven touchdowns tallied by the merciless Blue Streaks.

Mansfield's tackling efforts were fierce. Late in the third period, for instance, Ben Fleming was shoved off on a sweep. Tygers hemmed him close to the sidelines, but he tumbled six with a straight arm to clear his own path on a 54-yard touchdown jaunt.

Fleming again eluded as many potential tacklers in an 82-yard touchdown run that climaxed the farce in the final frame.

Mansfield's own running game lacked its usual potency. Fumbles halted operations frequently, but weak blocking was a major fault.

The Sandusky football team is not 45 points better than Mansfield, Coach Bob Whittaker admitted after the easy triumph. Neither is there any question that the Tygers were quickly demoralized by their failure to escape their own domain after presenting the Blue Streaks with what might be called two unearned touchdowns in the first half.

But the fact that they were badly tanned remains, and it would be rather difficult to temper the sting of the beating with alibis.

* * *

It Could Have Been Worse, Too.

WHILE the figures do not show a 45 to 0 superiority, Mansfield is fortunate that it was not beaten worse.

Occasional gallant defensive stands were all that kept Sandusky from running up its biggest total of the season.

In addition to tallying three touchdowns, the Blue Streaks had three more called back. Seven—yes, seven—other times the Streaks were denied scores by great goal line stands.

It was the easiest victory the Blue Streaks registered in the four-year history of the new series. The game marked the third straight year that the Tygers have failed to score a touchdown against Sandusky. No team in any other Mansfield rivalry has been able to accomplish such a feat.

The Tygers were kept on the run all afternoon chasing Streaks, who scored in every period, and the one fellow whom they seldom caught up with was Substitute Fleming, a colored speedster, who rang up three touchdowns on sprints of 82, 54 and 32 yards.

Fleming, who might never have been discovered Saturday had the game not been so loose to permit wholesale substitutions, also threw for another touchdown.

His kicking was as good as Mansfield's was bad. Once he punted 45 yards out of bounds on Mansfield's one, and booted another out of the field on the eight with a slightly shorter kick.

Although not as quick and accurate as Fleming, Gene Balconi, who has been a thorn in Mansfield's side for two straight years now, also did some fine footwork to keep the Tygers deep in their own territory.

No individual Mansfield performance merits any particular mention as the Tygers were completely overshadowed by the hosts.

The only bright spots in the Mansfield play were the defensive barriers that it erected to take the ball on downs five times within the 30-yard marker.

The Tygers came out of the game bruised and disheartened, but the only serious injuries were suffered by Jack Phaler and Howard Hershey. A bad knee will probably keep Hershey out of action Saturday, Murphy said today. Phaler is nursing a chest injury.

Sandusky registered seven first down to four for Mansfield, accumulated a total of 241 yards to 116 for the Tygers and returned 187 yards to only 56 from kicks.

The only department in the statistics in which Mansfield held the edge was in passing, but then only in the number of completions. Five completions yielded only 22 yards for the Tygers to 29 in two completions for Sandusky.

* * *

One Touchdown Followed Another.

HERE'S a brief summary of the misery: The first Sandusky score came three minutes after the kickoff. Nagle's bad boot gave the Streaks the ball on the 29, and Balconi scored on the sixth play on a sweep from the 19.

Extra Points Win Ball Games, Too, Mr. Crisler

By HENRY McLEMORE

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—I will gladly furnish the use of my living room, if any of you would care to join me in an informal discussion of that football problem child, the try for point after touchdown.

Certainly there is no need for discussion concerning the try for the extra point. It causes too many heartaches, costs too many jobs and brings about too much controversy each fall to be ignored. The tremendously important part it plays in a great sport is evident to everyone who reads the scores of the games each Saturday. Not a week goes by without a dozen or more important games being won or lost by the extra point.

Minnesota's 7 to 6 victory over Michigan in the battle for the "little brown jug" was Saturday's standout example. George Faust, Minnesota quarterback, kicked the extra point and Dan Smick, Michigan end, didn't.

Those who dislike the extra point, and urge its discontinuance, probably will employ the statistics of this game in their argument in the meeting. They are likely to point out that a team which makes 13 first downs to its opponent's 6, gains 157 yards by rushing against 91, and completes more than three times as many forward passes, all of which Michigan did, shouldn't be robbed of victory, or at worst, a tie.

Neutral as I am, such an argument makes quite a bit of sense to me, and also makes me ask if it is right for any one play to be so potent that failure can nullify an afternoon of fine blocking, tackling, and passing.

On the other hand, there is no getting around the cool, crisp logic that the point after touchdown is as fair for one team as for another.

Perhaps the tip-off on Michigan's failure to kick the extra point is contained in the book "practical football," whose author is Fritz Crisler, the Michigan coach. I chanced to browse through its delightful pages on arrangement of schedule, shoulder blocks, offensive play, end play, the passing game, generalship, scouting, and coaching problems.

And being somewhat of an old meanie, I looked to see how much space author Crisler devoted to the try after touchdown, but nowhere did I find a warning to coaches to lay stress on developing a man who could be counted on to add the extra point.

I'll bet you that the next edition of author Crisler's book will have plenty to say on the subject.

NEED IMPROVEMENT

Successive fumbles by Ike Smith and Nagle gave the Streaks two more scoring opportunities later in the first period, but Mansfield held for downs on both occasions. The Tygers refused Sandusky another score near the end of the quarter when Nagle again kicked badly to his own 25.

Denied a touchdown early in the second period after recovering Smith's second bobble, the Streaks blocked a Schwaner punt and Oglesby fell on the oval in the end zone for the second score.

Mansfield prevented three touchdowns in the third period after a couple of bad kicks and an interception, but the Streaks managed to put two across. Balconi's 42-yard return of a punt to the four set up the first one and Fleming got loose on a wide play to go 54 yards for the other.

Early in the fourth quarter, Fleming loped over the goal line with a short punt. He then passed to Babcock for a score and just before the end of the game, added insult to injury by taking a kick-off on his 18 and trotting all the way back. It was a spectacular climax to a dull football game.

The only occasions Mansfielders had legitimate reasons to cheer Saturday were when J. Merton Holcombe's band paraded at the half and the score of the cross country run was announced in the school's favor, but these were not enough offset the memory of the slaughter on the grid.

Led by a feminine drum major in shorts, Holcombe's band and drum corps, criticized for not stunting at the Columbus East game last week, presented their slickest performance of the year. A moving "S," operating within a border of red and white-uniformed figures, literally brought down the stands.

BELLOISE, ARCHIBALD VIE IN TITLE BOUT TONIGHT

NEW YORK —(INS)— The fight game—long dormant around these parts—climbs back into th spotlight tonight when Mike Belloise of New York tangles with Joey Archibald of Pawtucket, R. I., in a 15-round battle for the featherweight championship of the world.

The New York Boxing Commission will recognize the winner as world champion and it is unlikely that other commissions will withhold recognition. For these are about the best fighters in a division devoid of much class since Henry Armstrong voluntarily relinquished the title. Archibald is a 7 to 5 favorite.

MARKET PACED BY AIRCRAFT, UTILITY ISSUES

Gains Run to More Than Two Points in Active Opening; Steels, Motors Down.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Aircrafts and utilities surged upward in today's market while profit taking put dents in steels and motors.

Gains running to more than 2 points at the opening were later reduced and prices were somewhat irregular near the second hour.

The ticker tape was behind during almost the first half hour. Dealings in low-priced issues dominated the list. Commonwealth & Southern, United Corporation, Curtiss Wright and North America Aviation changed hands in blocks of 1,000 to 30,000 shares, generally slightly on the upside.

Consolidated Edison, North American and Electric Power & Light were fast performers at fractional advances. Backward were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, N Y. Central, U. S. Rubber and Montgomery Ward.

Bonds and commodities were slightly mixed. Copper stocks were strong in foreign securities markets.

Analysts studied the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that favorable factors still predominated in the steel industry despite price weakness which has caused some hesitation in buying.

It was added that prospects for steady or heavier steel requirements of leading users over the next 60 days are regarded as bright.

Expanding demand from automobile producers was seen as a sustaining influence for steel output.

BITTEN BY DOG, SUES FOR $554

Florist Says He Was Attacked While Making Delivery.

A suit for $554 damages had been filed in municipal court today by Clarence Stuhldreher, 450 Stewart lane, manager of the Flower shop at the R. B. Maxwell company, who was injured June 21 when he was bitten by a dog while making a delivery at a Glessner avenue home.

Stuhldreher named Mr. and Mrs. William Kopical and their two daughters, Olga and Mary, 436 Glessner avenue, defendants in the action. He said he was attacked by a large police dog while making a delivery at the home.

The petition says Stuhldreher suffered a wound on the leg, severe shock and as the result incurred medical bills for which he seeks judgment. He is represented by Atty. Marshal C. Moore.

Christ Chokreff, 38, Mansfield baker, was placed on probation for one year when he pleaded guilty in common pleas court Saturday to an indictment for receiving stolen tires

Chokreff, who was among five Mansfielders indicted by the grand jury on the same count, told Judge C H Huston he purchased four new truck tires from some colored youths for $12. Property of the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company, the tires had been stolen from freight cars.

JAPS CAPTURE RAILWAY LINE IN PUSH TO CANTON

But Hong Kong Hears Nippon Meets Strong Resistance From Chinese Troops.

(By Associated Press)

HONG KONG — The Japanese army announced tonight it had straddled the Canton-Kowloon railway "at several points" but reports from areas further north indicated that the rapid Japanese drive toward Canton was meeting its first serious, organized Chinese resistance.

Severe fighting was reported from Wongtong, about 40 miles east of Canton, in what appeared to be the first major battle to decide the fate of the South China metropolis and the vital supply lines radiating from it.

The Japanese communique announcing the cutting of the Canton-Kowloon railway, chief link between the British colony of Hongkong and Canton, did not name the points affected, but they were believed to be between Pingwu, 15 miles north of the Kongkong frontier, and Cheungmuktau, halfway to Canton.

Meet 100,000 Chinese.

After driving 45 miles inland from Bias bay landing point, the Japanese column thrusting toward Canton ran into well entrenched positions near Wongtong held by some 100,000 Chinese troops equipped with field guns, howitzers and anti-aircraft defenses.

One of the forces which cut the Canton-Kowloon railway was known to have been landed on the Pearl river delta to the west of the line.

Other forces crossed the East river after the capture of Waichow and fought their way up the Waichow-Canton highway to within 50 miles of Canton.

Indications that the Japenese intended to drive straight on to the South China metropolis were seen in the fact that Japanese warplanese heavily bombarded Tsengsing, Chinese troop concentration point 45 miles east of Canton.

Canton was placed under martial law.

Wongsha railway station was hit by 17 bombs yesterday and more than 20 persons were killed in extensive Japenese air raids along the Canton-Hankow and the Canton-Kowloon railways near the city.

Communications between Hongkong and Canton were completely paralyzed.

Literally hundreds of hamlets and villages were reported razed or burning as a result of air attacks.

A new Japanese landing at Namtau, on the Pearl river delta near Hongkong, was reported to have been made yesterday with remarkable ease and lack of opposition.

Military observers now believe a decisive battle will be fought near Tsengsing, where the terrain is favorable for a defense stand and where the Chinese must block the Japanese or permit an attack on Canton from the east.

Amazing war refugee scenes were being enacted along the East river and at Canton as tens of thousands trudged into the interior. Fully half a million civilians were reported already to have left Canton.

SETS HEARING IN PENSION SUIT

Supreme Court to Hear Action in Mandamus Wednesday.

COLUMBUS —(INS)— The Ohio supreme court today assigned arguments for Thursday in the mandamus action in which Edgar S. Byers, Cleveland Heights, is seeking to compel Governor Davey and other state officials to comply with old age pension requirements of the federal social security board.

The arguments will be on a motion by the governor's attorneys to strike from the plaintiff's petition most of the allegations on which the mandamus demand was based. This motion contended there was no evidence of failure to comply with the Ohio old age pension laws and no legal compulsion on the state officials to comply with the federal act.

IDEAL ELECTRIC HEAD ON STAND

Vinson Denies He Refused to Meet With Union as Labor Hearing Nears Close.

Testimony in the National Labor Relations board hearing of charges of unfair labor practices against the Ideal Electric and Manufacturing company was nearing completion today as S. Glenn Vinson, president of the firm, went on the witness stand to deny that he and other company officials had refused to meet with union representatives in an attempt to settle labor differences.

Vinson was questioned at length concerning the strike at the plant in 1936 which was regarded as the forerunner of disputes between the company officials and Local 705 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, a CIO unit.

He said he had asked members of the union's grievance committee to put their men back to work while the committee and company officials attempted to effect a settlement of the labor dispute.

Witnesses for the union testfied previously that the firm's officers refused to meet with the committee to discuss settlement of the dispute.

Vinson joined Otto J. Fink, plant superintendent and a number of formen in a flat denial that union members had been dismissed at the factory because of their affiliation with the CIO.

The hearing, which opened at the courthouse just two weeks ago, was expected to be completed today or Tuesday. Testimony will be sent to Washington for consideration by the NLRB. Examiner Webster Powell is presiding at the hearing.

'THE WOMEN' AT HANNA THEATER

Clair Boothe's Controversial Comedy Opens One-week Run.

The special company of "The Women" which Max Gordon organized to present Clare Boothe's comedy on tour begins an engagement at the Hanna theatre, Cleveland, tonight for a one-week stay.

Not in recent years has a play caused so much controversy. The author, on one hand is accused of belittling her sex, and on the other, of painting a graphic picture of that group of women who have more time and money than is good for them. There are forty characters in "The Women", and the action of the play runs from drawing room to kitchen pantry, and Miss Boothe attempts to show that in sip, at least, all women are sisters gossip, at least, all women are sisters under the skin. Sharp tongues lash very much the same whether they are in the mouths of grand dame or parlor maid.

During the three seasons run at the Ethel Barrymore theatre in New York, "The Women" has enjoyed practically capacity houses.

Women apparently enjoy seeing their sisters exposed to cat clawing and the men learning the lowdown about the opposite sex.

RAILROAD SUES OVER OVERHEAD

Asks Court to Determine Who Must Pay for Repairs to Richland County Span.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company today filed a suit in common pleas court naming the Richland county commissioners, and asking the court to determine who must pay the cost of repairing an overhead bridge on a county highway in Springfield township.

Located on the Stiving road near Springmill, the bridge was closed to traffic several weeks ago by the railroad. The bridge spans the tracks.

Although the railroad company's petition says the bridge was built in 1892, there are no county records to show who built it, commissioners said.

When property holders in the area served by the road requested that commissioners repair it, they asked Attorney General Herber S. Duffy for a decision as to the ownership and obligation for paying the repair cost. He has not ruled on the matter.

The railroad blockaded the road leading to the bridge after informing the county commissioners that the structure was unsafe for traffic.

BOARD SPLIT ON POWER FOR WLW

Sharp Difference to Leave Radio License Decision Up to Commissioner.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Sharp differences of opinion were reported today in the federal communications commission over a report recommending discontinuation of super-power radio broadcasting.

A sub-committee, composed of Commissioner T. A. M. Craven, George Henry Payne and Norman S. Case, recommended unanimously that radio station WLW be denied a renewal of its experimental license to operate at 500 kilowatts.

The station is owned and operated by the Crosley Radio corporation in Cincinnati, O., and the only one in the country authorized to use more than 50 kilowatts

Sources close to the commission expected the report to intensify disagreement among the commissioners whose differences on many subjects have attracted public attention. Final decision may not be made for several weeks.

It was said that Chairman Frank R. McNinch, Eugen O. Sykes and Thad H. Brown favored the granting of permission for continuation of super-power to the station.

The final decision, thus, may rest with Commissioner Paul A. Walker.

The report said that WLW's proposed experimental research program does not necessitate the use of 500 kilowatts power. It recommended that the station be required to return to the use of 50 kilowatts.

SALES TAX RECEIPTS UP

Sales tax receipts for Richland county, totaling $7,658 for the week ending Oct. 1, showed a slight gain over collections for the preceding week, but they were still far below figures for the corresponding period last year. Receipts for the entire state were more than $300,000 below sales tax figures for the same week last year, State Treasurer Clarence H. Knisley reported.

The relatives who came to attend the funeral discovered they had been misinformed. "It's comforting to know you would be missed," said Mrs. Higgins.

FINDS ITALIANS LIKE IL DUCE

of intolerance against him exists here", he say, "but if there is any feeling against him, I have seen no evidence of it. The followers of the Fascist state certainly must be willing ones, for every time Il Duce speaks, crowds gather wherever there is a loud speaker; and I have been in private homes where its occupants stopped everything in order to listen to the words of the 'Capo di State'."

Finds Costs Low.

Bonfiglio says that life is much easier in Italy than Americans generally believe, and that while there is little money, it costs much less to live over there than here.

"It is true that there isn't much money in circulation here," he says, "for in terms of the American dollar, the lira is worth only about 5 cents. So that an American dollar changed into 20 lira can buy what the dollar can't do—buy food enough for an average family for about three days."

"Fruits," he points out, "are only two and three cents a pound, cheese ten cents and all other things accordingly, except meat, which is 35 cents a pound. Houses may be rented for from $2 to $5 a month."

The average laborer, he says, is paid $1 a day, but a family may live comfortably on that sum.

The standard of living, he believes, has been raised considerably under Mussolini's regime.

JURY PROBING MEDICAL GROUP

U. S. Panel to Investigate Charge A. M. A. Violates Anti-Trust Laws.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON —The department of justice will ask a special grand jury today to return criminal indictments against the American Medical association and the District of Columbia Medical society for alleged "coercive" action against a cooperative health movement.

The government charges that the medical societies have violated the anti-trust statutes in opposing the group health association, an organization of government employes to furnish themselves and their families medical care.

The case is one of the most unusual, and in this country unprecedented, applications of the anti-trust laws. Officials frankly admit that it is a test case which, if successful, may result in similar action in other cties.

Most of today will be devoted to selection of a jury from a panel of 500 persons. Actual presentation of the government's case probably will begin tomorrow and continue two or three weeks.

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold has charged that doctors in the District of Columbia, through their organization, the District Medical society, an affiliate of the A. M. A., have hampered physicians associated with G. H. A.

They have been "coercive," he charges, by threatening to expel from the society doctors who are employed by the cooperative and doctors who consult with its physicians.

G. H. A. was formed a little over a year ago by approximately 2,500 government employes. Members contribute monthly sums, in return for which they and their families are guaranteed certain medical services.

U. S., BRITAIN SPEED PROGRAM FOR RE-ARMING

London Spurs Drive to Stop Dictators; Churchill in Plea for Action.

cabinet as minister of supply. His job would be to rally industry, carrying out plans drawn up by the service departments.

Sir John Anderson, former governor of Bengal, is mentioned as a probability for minister of national service—the first time such a post has been created in peace-time.

Lord Runciman, former president of the board of trade, mediator in Czechoslovakia, and one of Britain's greatest shipping men, is likely to get the task of organizing the country's merchant shipping for an emergency.

Chamberlain also must appiont successors to the late Lord Stanley, who was Dominions secretary, and Alfred Duff Cooper, who resigned as first lord of the admiralty in opposition to the prime minister's policies.

The Earl of Stanhope looms as Stanley's successor, and Herbert Morrison, fiery laborite, may be appointed to the admiralty.

While Chamberlain has conclusively decided against dissolution of parliament, seven bye-elections soon will be held for the house of commons, and the main issue, on which 350,000 voters in various parts of the country will ballot, will be his foreign policy.

In his speech to America, Churchill confirmed that some form of mobilization of all the citizenry for possible war purposes is being worked out This will likely take the form of a compulsory national register.

Churchill himself has been mentioned as a cabinet possibility, but he has been such an outspoken critic of Chamberlain that the chance is remote.

Churchill's appeal to the United States seemed also emotional.

The ex-cabinet minister insisted that if Britain, France and Russia had stood together, "the German dictator would have been confronted with such a formidable arry that he would have been deterred from his purpose . . . and how different would be our prospects today!"

The democracies have been weakened, Churchill said, while dangers they face have grown vastly.

Millions Needed.

As various federal agenices concerned with United States aeronautical activities prepared to consult with the budget bureau on next year's expeditures, an International News Service survey indicated that close to $350,000,000 may be requested by President Roosevelt in his January budget estimate.

This figure may go higher after military aviation studies, outlined earlier this week by Mr. Roosevelt, are completed.

In brief, the survey showed that for army and navy air programs, at least $275,000,000 will be demanded. This would be an increase of $75,000,000 over the appropriation for the present fiscal year.

For development of commercial aviation, the civil aeronautics authority probably will require a minimum of $25,000,000, or $10,000,000 more than was provided this year.

Air mail payments to commercial airlines may jump close to $35,000,000 annually after this year as compared with the $26,000,000 currently provided for this purpose.

An increase also is anticipated in coast guard aviation appropriations.

The main objective of the forthcoming aviation program is to coordinate the facilities of both the military establishments and the commercial airlines. In this effort, the development of private flying interest will not be overlooked.

On the military side, the navy department's program calls for the building of a naval air fleet of 3,000 planes. It now has only 1,868 planes, including some that are obsolete. The army is authorized to bring up its air strength to 2,320 planes by July 1940. Currently it has 1,226, with 1,002 on order.

In addition, the navy soon expects to start construction of a new dirigible for which it is permitted to spend $3,000,000.

Archbishop Critic Of Chamberlain.

CANTERBURY, England — (AP) —The Archbishop of Canterbury, Anglican primate of all England, today guardedly criticized Prime Minister Chamberlain's Munich peace settlement in a speech to his diocesan conference.

The archbishop, the Most Reverend Cosmo Gordon Lang, who was former Prime Minister Baldwin's staunchest supporter in the 1936 crisis over the abdication of King Edward VIII, said:

"I think we must admit that though we are filled with thankfulness for peace we cannot have any enthusiasm for the terms by which peace was won."

He referred to the agreement for the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia to satisfy the demands of Nazi Germany

Next Step Up to Czechs, Hungary Says.

BUDAPEST—(AP)—Baron Bothmer of the foreign office declared today that Czechoslovakia must make a new proposal before Hungary takes further action in her demands for Hungarian-populated regions of Czechoslovakia.

Such an offer, to lay a basis for renewing the interrupted Komarom conversations, is expected shortly, Baron Bothmer said But, he added, any new plan would be made more difficult to accept because of "increased Czechoslovak atrocities" in Hungarian minority regions.

Hungary, despite a general feeling that chances for a peaceful settlement have brightened considerably, still moved men and equipment to the Czechoslovak frontier. The cabinet, meanwhile met to consider suggestions of Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini of Italy for settling the dispute.

Czechs Leaning to Nazi Co-operation.

(By Associated Press)

PRAGUE — Czechoslovakia appeared today to have switched her gigantic reconstruction task to a new course—co-operation with Germany.

Chancellor Adolf Hitler, it was learned, has assured her that the country now is on a sounder basis and that it can retain its culture and achieve greater prosperity by co-operation with the German orbit

Czechoslovaks, if not convinced by the rosy German picture, are according to all indications resigned to the necessity of looking to Germany for support.

German correspondents returning to Prague have been ordered to write only "kindly" of Czechoslovakia and have ceased their attacks on the little republic.

An increasing desire to co-operate with Germany was seen in the Czechoslovak cabinet's decision yesterday to send four ministers to Berlin: Finance Minister Joseph Kalfus, Minister of Commerce and Industry Imrich Karvas, Agriculture Minister Vladislav Feieraband and Minister without Portfolio Hugo Vavrecka.

The size and importance of the delegation was taken as an indication that development of a large program was hoped for by Czechoslovakia.

in medieval costumes. One was written in the odd spelling and usage of early England and she told me that they had been studying Canterbury Tales at the time and that Chaucer's language had made a big impression on Louis. Another note began in French, switched to German, then to English intermittently sprinkled with Spanish words. They were all written as invitations to visit "Lord" Bromfield at his castle for the week-end, to hunt fox or attend a big party of some kind."

Sattler also tells of a little known incident that happened when Bromfield returned to Mansfield a number of years ago to lecture here.

"One of Bromfield's teachers, now dead, saw in Louis the possibilities of a writer and predicted that he would one day be a famous man, and she encouraged and helped him. When he returned to Mansfield 10 years ago, he called on her and gave her a complete set of his books, with appropriate notes of gratitude on the flyleaves Bromfield never forget those who were kind to him."

The story also tells of how the boy who was destined to become one of the greatest writers of his time, used to spend his time at the library browsing among books instead of playing football with the boys of his class

City Allows Five More Days on Water Accounts.

With approximately 40 per cent of the west side water and sewer rental bills still outstanding, Fred E. Lingafelter, secretary of the water, sewer and garbage departments today announced a five-day extension of the collection period.

Lingafelter said Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist had authorized the collection of water and sewer bills without penalty until Oct 20. The collection period was to have closed last Saturday.

Lingafelter said the collection to date represents approximately $37,000 of the $58,000 billing. He warned that after Thursday unpaid water and sewer bills would be subject to the regular 10 per cent penalty added for delinquency.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1938.

According to at least one doctor, people with hobbies rarely go crazy—about anything else.

In countries where there is constant glorification of war it is difficult to rear a generation that prefers peace.

It would please a lot of folks to see One-eyed Syrovy and Handsome Adolf in a rasslin' match, with no holds barred.

Keep Up the Good Work.

PESSIMISTS who have doubted that the automobile accident rate can be reduced, have been happily proven wrong this year, for the rate has gone down sharply since 1937.

Apparently the public ear has finally been opened to the teachings of the safety experts. States and communities have carried on more and better prevention campaigns than in the past. In some areas there has been noticeable improvement in traffic law enforcement, and the arrest and punishment of offenders. Lastly, a start has been made in various states to make accidents impossible by constructing modern highways, without intersections, and with separated lanes that prevent head-on collisions.

At first glance, figures from Richland county do not seem to fit in with the reduction in traffic deaths—here automobile fatalities are about on a par with last year's toll.

But the record of Richland country drivers is good—the great majority of persons killed in Richland county accidents were not Richland county residents.

They were strangers, driving on strange roads. And in that fact is a point that safety organizations should go to work on. They should stress to every driver the necessity of being more careful away from home than on familiar highways. At home he knows where danger lurks—amid distant surroundings, he has no idea what peril may be over the next slight incline, or around the next turn.

The country must fight all the harder to keep the accident rate down—and to reduce it further.

Science and Social Good.

THE new Squibb Institute for Medical Research, recently opened at New Brunswick, N. J., will carry on chiefly pure research in the biological and medical sciences. The distinguished scientists gathered for the dedication of the institute talked much about the "untrammeled search for truth" and put its practical application for human welfare up to society.

"The history of science for 2,000 years," said one speaker, "proves conclusively that no one can foretell or predict or plan the outcome of the untrammeled roving of the human spirit, searching for truth and truth alone. Whether these practical results shall be good or ill is no concern of those who have founded this institution. That is something that depends upon civilization."

Yet one of the criticisms of modern civilization has long been that its science is far ahead of its social adjustment, that too many of its great discoveries and inventions have been turned to selfish and destructive uses instead of human good. Perhaps scientists should pay more attention to the application of their own work. We need some sort of transformer device between the pure research laboratory and the social laboratory outside which includes the school, the factory, the business office, the international conference room, and so on.

Recovery.

FOR taxpayers who have feared a limitless increase of our national debt there is a new ray of hope. The President has ordered the WPA to hold expenditures up to next March 1 within the $700,000,000 of emergency funds now available. Even that will mean spending a lot more money, but the retarding of the spending rate is important, and the reason given is reassuring.

"Employment is increasing everywhere," says Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams, "and the outlook is brighter than at any time in a year. I look for a steady increase in employment all over the United States and in all lines."

Many of us hesitate to yield to such optimism, because there have been so many disappointments. But recent improvement seems to be the real thing, and is so regarded by many economists. There was a good pick-up in midsummer, when business usually lags, and lately the flow of labor back to work seems to be growing into a great, steady stream.

This re-employment is what the country needs most, and it seems to be based now on sound principles. There is a widespread shortage of goods in many lines, a growing demand for them, and a growing feeling that the time is ripe for a real recovery.

Our Own Worst Enemies.

PROFESSOR Russell M. Wilder of the Mayo Foundation at Rochester, Minn., addressing a group of 1,200 research scientists the other day, presented some practical ideas on the subject of the current world scene.

"Capitalistic democracy today," he said, "is under fire as never before. Competing systems are established over a large part of the world and the success of ours in promoting the public welfare will alone insure its continuance.

"Its most dangerous enemies are vain men who think their successes are owing exclusively to themselves, selfish men who demand much but give little, and stupid men out of touch with changing standards of morality and social-mindedness. Loud denunciation of other social systems can avail little to insure the success of ours. We shall be known only by our works."

Perhaps we should seek to curb our own follies rather than spend our time and energy shouting down the Communists and Nazis and Fascists of the world. Our criticism of them will never be wholly effective until we have solved democratically the problems they appear temporarily to have solved brutally and autocratically.

Hitler says he "wants no Czechs" in taking over Czechoslovak territory, says a Nazi spokesman. He solves that little problem very simply by driving them out.

After hearing some modernists, Robert Quillen concludes: "They like Christianity but regret that Christ didn't preach it correctly."

They tell of a 3-year-old Louisiana boy who can already say "yes" in three languages—and his political future seems assured.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—It isn't any business of ours, but if the circulation department of Life Magazine wants to get acquainted with its editorial staff we'll be glad to make the introductions.

There's one editor, anyway, the circulation boys should meet, because it will save them stamps and lessen the chores of the private secretaries.

I have in mind Mr. Wilson Hicks, ex-newspaperman and an old boss of ours, who resigned two years ago to become associated with Life.

You can easily imagine our surprise, therefore, when the postman called yesterday with a letter for Mr. Hicks. The letter was from Life, and, in effect, it went something like this:

"Dear Sir: You were one of the charter members of Life Magazine, but for some inexplicable reason your subscription was never renewed. Why? Don't you like Life? Just what do you think of Life? Won't you be good enough to examine the current issue and give us a frank expression of your opinion?

As I say, it isn't any business of ours, but we feel that since Mr. Hicks has been associate editor of Life for two years now it is time the boys in the circulation department heard about it. People ought to be told these things.

LABOR unions, faulty rehearsals, and temperamental actors aren't the only problems that plague producers before a Broadway opening. There is, at present, the vexing matter of a playhouse at Broadway and 51st street, which Warner Brothers built some time ago. Above it rises a costly and light-studded sign: The Hollywood Theater.

But the theater's real name now is the Fifty-First Street Theater. It seems strange to see its new name in small marquee lettering denying the fabulous legend on top. However, Warner Bros. won't remove the huge sign for the very excellent reason that to remove this would cost a small fortune. And the producers of "Knights of Song," which is all about Gilbert and Sullivan, covering 30 years of their careers, are in a quandary. The play goes into the "Fifty-First," but they are afraid that "Hollywood" sign will confuse the cash-customers, and send them galloping off into the mists, looking for a playhouse that doesn't exist.

THE opening of "Oscar Wilde" brought a gasp and a start to most Rialto observers. This exceedingly frank play was glimpsed in Paris several months ago by George M. Cohan, who told reporters on his return, "They call a spade a spade in Paris." . . . "Well," inquired a columnist, "what do you think will happen when it opens in New York?" . . . Mr. Cohan thought that over. "If it isn't closed by the constabulary" he replied, "it ought to run six years."

For years Ben Bernie has carried a little pair of scissors in his coat pocket, to snip the ends off his cigars. Recently he abandoned the rolled weed in favor of a pipe. He was SOME flabbergasted the other evening when, in an absent minded moment, he drew his scissors and whacked off the end of his necktie.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Thursday, Oct. 17, 1918.

Mansfielders read of the capture of Lille, chief German base in northern France, one of the decisive victories of the war.

Citizens were asked to remain at home during the evening so that a house-to-house canvass could be made in the interests of the Fourth Liberty loan.

Attorney general of the state ruled that Mansfield school teachers must be paid for time that schools were closed for influenza epidemic.

Mrs. Harry Beck, West Third street went to Portland, Ind., to visit her daughter, Mrs. A. J. Grissel.

Thomas Davey, 71 Helen avenue, Harry Newton Beck, 132 West Sixth street, and Harry Doncocoes, 198 South Foster street, were among Mansfielders who died of influenza. Forty-five new cases were reported for the day.

FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY

Tuesday, Oct. 17, 1933.

Miss Cecilia McCarthy and William F. Rathburn were married at St. Peter's church.

Miss Vivian Ost, Walter avenue, was taken home after recovering from operation at General hospital.

Mrs. John Pierce was general chairman of the Y. W. C. A. membership drive.

Miss Amy Twitchell, Parker street, returned to Richmond, Va., to accept a new position.

Police were looking for a hit skip driver whose car damaged one driven by C. I. Hostetter at Grace and Ashland road.

Storage eggs were placed on market because of shortage of fresh eggs in Mansfield and vicinity.

War Planes Value Still In Doubt

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — That bomb-dropping aeroplanes are perfectly terrible goes without saying. Nevertheless, terrestrial fighters generally deny that the plane is much of a military weapon. They admit that it's a valuable accessory for both army and naval purposes—in fact, perhaps an indispensable accessory, in modern warfare. However, they maintain that no imaginable swarm of fliers can win a battle, or even do any considerable essential damage to an enemy.

They agree that aviators' observations are enormously useful to surface warriors, but argue that the latter must wage the real combat. Aviators tell a different story. Their version is that the plane is the main thing today—that armies have ceased to be of any great consequence, and that navies practically are a waste of money, because they can be sunk so easily from aloft. Just where the new chief of the army air corps, Major Gen. Henry H. Arnold, stands on this question is not yet of record.

It is difficult for a layman to judge between these conflicting accounts. His suspicion is that the surfacemen don't like to confess that their occupation's gone—that they are, indeed, a bunch of outmoded old fogies. Yet, contrariwise, there's the suspicion that the airmen are overly enthusiastic.

* * *

General Mitchell's Testimony.

Gen. William Mitchell, formerly assistant chief of the army air corps, doubtless is the nearest to a 100 per cent aviator that this country has had thus far. He was so exceedingly so that he was court-martialed for the violence of his utterances and wished into military retirement—the surfacers being thoroughly out of patience with him, and in a majority.

"Billy" Mitchell, seeking to demonstrate that a lone aviator could sink anything afloat, challenged the navy department to anchor a ship off the Virginia Capes for him to drop bombs on.

That was several years ago, at a time when an international naval disarmament treaty had just been effected. The navy had a surplus, half-finished war vessel on hand, which was due to be scrapped under the terms of the bargain. Accordingly, the department did anchor the ship off the Capes, and, sure enough, Billy, taking off in a plane, sank it.

Ever since then he has reasoned that navies are no good—and that he proved it.

The navy contends otherwise. For one item, it wishes it never had anchored that ship off the Capes. Furthermore, it says the test wasn't a fair one. The ship was at anchor, stationary and unmanned. Billy was at libery to try and try again, until he hit his target—down a funnel or some such place. If that boat had been wiggling around and shooting back with anti-aircraft guns, the navy's dope is that Billy couldn't possibly have done it.

And maybe not. It just goes to illustrate that the question remains open.

It's a bit too soon to judge what aviators can do.

The last World war didn't decide the issue. Aviation then comparatively was in its infancy. It is yet, for that matter.

To date it's been tried out somewhat farther—in Spain and China.

In neither of these countries has it accomplished anything decisive. It has murdered a lot of non-combatants—that's all.

A city is pinned down in one spot and can be bombed conveniently. Perhaps an occasional bomb will hit it somewhere, however effective its anti-aircraft defense may be. A ship at sea, can do some dodging. A land force can scatter.

And, now and then, an aerial bomber will be perforated. I've seen it happen.

* * *

Peace Time Tests Risky.

It's hard to test aviation in peace time.

Desiring to take chances, a plane goes up. Anti-aircraft guns are supposed to shoot at it. But they mustn't hit it. So it drags behind it what's known as a sleeve to be shot at—like the advertisements that some planes trail after them.

Well, maybe the sleeve is hit. That isn't very convincing. The plane MUSTN'T be hit, however. Public opinion wouldn't permit that, for experimental purposes. So the marksmen must be careful, not only as to what they're shooting at but also as to what they're NOT shooting at.

This isn't so confusing as to Spain and China, but it's plenty confusing to our airmen and anti-airmen.

Health Advice

How to Blow Your Nose.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

MY ESTEEMED colleagues in the New York State Department of Health have issued a statement concerning the scientific way of blowing the nose.

Since the time of year has come when we may expect the noise of the blowing of noses to be heard in the land, it is my duty to examine this statement with the indulgence of my readers.

It is unscientific, according to this report, to grasp the nose at the nostril or open end, placing a hankerchief over these apertures and forcefully exhaling the breath. This causes many infectious secretions which may or may not be present to backfire into the sinuses and middle ear. It causes, according to report, sinus disease and middle ear disease.

The correct method is described as follows:

"Place the handkerchief about one and one-half inches above the tip of the nose, holding the cloth immediately above the nasal bones, at all times keeping the nostrils open, and then blow."

Won't Accept It.

Well, I put this down for purposes of information, but with all due respect of the high source of this advice, I refuse to accept it. I challenge anyone to produce one case of sinus disease that was caused by nose blowing. I mean I want proof: I don't just want a case of sinus disease in a person with a history of nose blowing.

And as an argument on the other side, I point to the fact that the portion of the population who are freer from sinus are the most robust trumpeters in the nose-blowing line. You take a stout old gentleman in a club, who has just deliberately removed his pocket handkerchief, and made a sound which is like the combination of a cavalry regiment going over a bridge and a rhinoceros calling its mate, and ask him about his sinus trouble. He will deny even knowing that he has any sinuses. And compare him to the poor, sniveling, dripping, hawking sinus victim who hasn't ever had the strength to blow his nose with any vigor!

No, leave us to the esthetic enjoyment of a good, resounding nose blow, and have no fear of the consequences.

Young America Asks—

Should We Only Do the Work We Like?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

Should we pass up the "uncongenial job" . . . wait for "the right thing to turn up"? Many a youngster is doing just that because some authority has told him it's the smart policy.

BUT IS IT? F. M. Vickers of Minden, Louisiana, wonders.

"Dear Miss Robinson—

"A famous writer has been giving unemployed young people advice which seems singularly inappropriate for present conditions. He advocates taking only the type of work one likes and says that fifty cents earned in a congenial job is better than a dollar earned under uncongenial conditions.

"Unfortunately, many of us are only too willing to follow such advice—or use it for an alibi. But, like most utopian ideas, isn't it rather impractical? What about the unpleasant work which MUST be done . . . the dirty, heart-breaking, monotonous toil that NO ONE CAN POSSIBLY ENJOY?

"What America — and all the world—really needs is more workers who are willing to start at anything, however unpleasant... rather than the choosey pickers . . . more who are willing to start at the bottom rung of the ladder . . . more of us who have enough imagination and spunk to see that any job may be the first stepping stone to success . . . if we'll make it so!"

F. M. Vickers—age 20
Route 4, Box 264
Minden, Louisiana.
($10 prize winner)

You're right, son — more right than you know. Not only do the tiresome, uncongenial jobs need to be done . . . but we all need to do them. Such jobs are as necessary for our full development as food and water. They supply certain character vitamins which nothing else can give. No matter how ample your education or training, you can't possibly become a competent craftsman in ANY line until you've served your rap in the school of hard knocks. No failure can ever frighten the man who has taken that rap . . . no success is certain for the man who hasn't.

HOW FREE DARE MARRIAGE BE?

There's the puzzler which a worried sweetheart — Helen Veit of Columbus, Ohio, hands us.

"Dear Miss Robinson—

"Can married folk retain the freedom they had in single days? My fiance thinks they can. He says that's the 'modern attitude,' and believes our coming marriage shouldn't hinder his having an occasional luncheon with some old sweetheart. I, says he, am to do likewise with my former men friends.

"I've tried to be broad-minded but I'm beginning to have doubts. Might not such an arrangement drive us apart as time goes on? We both know we must expect a certain amount of disagreement and disillusion — and we believe that our love is strong enough to overcome them. But suppose such a crisis should come when we have a date with a sympathetic friend . . . Isn't there the danger of unwise confidences . . . confidences which might set the stage for suspicion, resentment and divorce?

"Yet, on the other hand, so many marriages fail because husband and wife become bored by each other's exclusive society—I wish I knew which is right!"

Helen Veit—age 21
385 South Sixth St.
Columbus, Ohio.
($10 prize winner)

That's a tricky one! So I'm going to pass it on to the crowd. Suppose YOU were about to be married—Em or Al—what would your vote on this "free marriage" proposition?

SHOULD A MAN'S MISTAKE BE HELD AGAINST HIM FOREVER? SHOULD HIS PUNISHMENT NEVER END?

From behind gray walls comes that brief challenge to Society which claims that a man may be free when "he has paid his debt to Society" . . . yet continues to hold him bound. Stephen J. Le Bar of Paterson, N. J., speaking—"Dear Miss Robinson—

"Why do so many youngsters become habitual criminals? Here is my answer—BECAUSE FROM THE MOMENT THE FIRST FINGERPRINT IS TAKEN, THAT BOY OR MAN BECOMES A BRANDED FELON, HOUNDED FOREVER FOR THAT FIRST MISTAKE.

"I'm not 'sob sistering' over crime or criminals. I believe wrong-doers should be punished. But, after they've paid their debt, shouldn't they be allowed to make a really fresh start? The result of our present system is that the prisons are always full . . . the taxpayers are always burdened.

"Isn't there some more intelligent plan? Men outside prison outlive their mistakes and are forgiven—why not the ex-con? Why doesn't congress pass a law which would permit convicts to join the army or navy and protect or fight for the country they once wronged? And another law that would destroy a convict's record and make him a regular citizen again after he had gone straight for five years."

Stephen J. Le Bar—age 22
356 Main St., Paterson, N. J.
($5 prize winner)

Stephen "prays God that someone may read his letter and start that better plan" and with all my heart I join in that prayer. For why should we, who have made so many mistakes, brand any man forever.

Keeping Step

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Politics has obscured a major drama in the decision of Governor Lehman to run again for governor of New York instead of seeking election to the senate.

By his decision to run again for his present office—a decision almost forced upon him as a means of saving the ticket—he log-jammed his own political career. He and his supporters felt fairly sure he could have been elected to the two-year short term in the senate left by the death of Senator Copeland. Re-election two years hence normally would not have been difficult. So, that way, his political future was cut out for him.

Further, he was plainly tired of the governorship. He would have been happy if he could have dropped out two years ago but was prevailed upon to run to "assure" President Roosevelt of carrying the state.

* * *

Farley Helped Him Decide.

THIS year almost the same situation developed. The party organization was frankly afraid of the Republican candidate, District Attorney Tom Dewey. With Lehman running again for governor they felt they could win. So, under pressure from Postmaster General Farley and organization leaders he scuttled his immediate senate ambition to run for governor.

To most people it would not be sad news to have to be governor of New York, but if a man wants to be senator instead, than what?

At the end of two years more of governorship, what will be in store for Lehman?

For various reasons Lehman is not looked upon as presidential timber and further, he never has indicated any desire to wield a big influence in the national party organization. He wanted only to be senator, and now the odds are not good there. In 1940 he might run for the senate but if the present Democratic candidate for that job, Rep. James Mead, is elected, he won't want to step out of the way for Lehman. And if a Republican is elected, he won't be so easy to unseat.

* * *

Looking Ahead to 1940.

LEHMAN didn't like the picture and his friends here say he bucked strenuously before giving up. For him it was mostly give and little get. If successful, he rescued and preserved the power of the state organization—for what? To win, of course, but equally to make certain that Roosevelt forces would control the New York delegation to the next national convention. And Lehman may or may not have been wholeheartedly for that.

Of course Lehman will not necessarily be retired altogether from public life by the change of plans. In event of a Democratic victory in 1940 he would be almost certain of some important diplomatic post, such as ambassador to England, upon his retirement from the governorship.

One jovial Irishman was reputed to have jested to Lehman in connection with his decision to give up immediate senatorial aspirations:

"Well, governor, remember the sacrifice Washington had to make at Valley Forge."

Words of the Wise

The happy man is he who distinguishes the boundary between desire and delight, and stands firmly on the higher ground; he who knows that pleasure is not only not possession, but is often to be lost, and always to be endangered by it.—Landor.

It is a kind of happiness to know to what extent we may be unhappy.—La Rochefoucauld.

A Farmer's Diary

October Picnic.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I TOOK the family on a picnic Sunday. Drove forty miles to a place we had stopped a year ago, and claimed as ours by right of exploration. On the way I bought a bushel of Northern Spy apples. Each child took one to appease his hunger until we reached the spot desired.

Here, inland from the road and bridge, at the foot of a bluff close to a clear, fast-moving stream, we chose a fire place site, then scattered to bring dry leaves and small pieces of driftwood, which we found lodged tightly among the shrubs on a little island.

Great flat stones lay all about the creek bed. I piled them up to make a place to cook, while the children waded up and down the creek. The smooth heavy stones, below, were sleek and slippery with the growth of algae. The children slipped and slid, and one fell down, with a splashing cry, and had to be set upon the bank in the sun and the mild south wind to dry his dripping clothes.

The bank on the farther side was steep and high, overgrown with spruce, elm, hickory and maple. Up this slope I watched the youngsters climb, and far along an old worn trail at the top, we heard their shouts of laughter.

The smoke wound up from our little fire, and in this quiet nook, my wife and I enjoyed the beauty of the wild. Some trees, at a distance up the stream, had washed out of root and thrown their trunks across the water. Scarlet leaves fell silently from the soft maples, and floated like torches on the bosom of the pool. The great trees along the bank and the blue sky above were deeply mirrored in its glassy surface.

Where it flowed more rapidly across its stony bed, I heard that liquid, splashing sound that seemed constant in its movement, like charming, ceaseless music. The bridge below may crumble and decay, the trees high on the bank may crash with age, yet this brimming stream, clear and refreshing, will still flow on, forever young, and bear within its bosom the stars and the transfigured beauty of future days.

CHAPTER 21.

The count looked relieved. "Ah, yes, yes, of course." Plainly, he said, he had not lost out on anything.

As they neared the front entrance to the house, the count smiled again, and held out a lean, brown hand.

"Let's be friends, can't we?" He spoke slowly. "Abbey and I understand each other. She knows I need plumbing for my castles, a good furnace, and some polo ponies. I haven't deceived her. I've asked for a dowry, and her father is settling it. But we like each other, we have fun, and she wants a title. Goodness knows why—but a title is my stock in trade. I'm not being underhanded. Please believe that of me."

Judy eyed him steadily. Then she extended her hand, too.

"I do. And I hope you'll be very happy, and the plumbing will always work, and the furnace will never give you trouble. Goodby."

She found a side door open tonight. She was waiting for her tray to come up when an imperative knock sounded at the door.

"Yes?" She knew it would be Abbey before the girl entered.

"The candles — did you get them?"

"There were no ivory ones, just white." Judy extended them.

"But they are cheap and crude! I can't use them." She stamped her foot. "I wanted ivory!"

"I may have some." Judy crossed to a drawer, opened it, and removed some exquisite carved candles. "I brought these back from the Orient a few years ago. They haven't been used. Candles really should make a lovely light."

The ruse worked. Abbey colored, "I couldn't take them, possibly. And—will you join us for dinner tonight? There are the family, Mr. Birrell, Count Philippe, and a few house guests, and a dozen people from the city."

Thus, it happened that Judy, dressed in a ruffled golden chiffon frock, with antique twisted gold rings in her ears, presently sat across the table from Ronald. The conversation concerned itself with foreign places—Hawaii, Finland, Singapore, Rome.

Some of the guests had been to all of them, some had seen one or two. Ronald had not been away from America. He talked about his mountains and Judy felt a fierce loyalty to him. He was so much finer, stronger, better than these people who sunned themselves in southern lands across blue waters. What did he see in Abbey Boland? Why did he take such an interest in her affairs? Did he know that she and the count were having a marriage of convenience?

* * *

She puzzled over it, smooth brows knitted, until the coffee was served in the drawing room. The group was going to the village to see a picture, and she gave herself up to the homely comfort of it. She did not go back to the drawing room, though, when the entertainment ended, and they had returned. Instead she went to bed.

Sunday morning she went alone to the small white church at the end of the village street. The service was sweet and simple. She felt clear and clean as she came away. Coming down the steps, Ronald joined her.

"You were there, too?" she asked, and felt glad.

"I was there. Could I interest you in a hike this afternoon?"

Abbey would dislike that, she knew, so she shook her head.

"Sorry. There are letters to write. And I'm pouring tea at 5."

She took her own candles to the great library where the table had been prepared. No one was around. She removed the pale blue candles which Abbey had used as a substitute for the shoddy white. She was admiring her handiwork when Abbey entered.

THE LIBRARY of the Boland home was a long, comfortable room. Its wide windows gave a sweeping view of the gray waters of the sound on the Sunday afternoon that Judy arranged the flowers and candles on the low table near the mammoth fireplace. There were tall autumn flowers, lavish with gold and orange and yellow, everywhere. And books. . .

She caught her breath. The room reminded her of the great library in her father's house where the paneled cases marched sedately along the three walls, and the fireplace, on the fourth wall was flanked with them, too. She remembered that she would not see that room again. The house had been sold for debts. She wondered, for a fleeting moment, in what kind of rooms her father and Sarita were living. Not that it mattered. Her path had left theirs as completely as though the two roads had been cardboard stuff, and a pair of gigantic scissors had severed them.

Judy's brown eyes were a little misty when the door opened and her low voice wasn't quite steady as she spoke.

"It's such a lovely room, Miss Boland," she said wistfully. 'I used to know one like it."

Abbey Boland had been riding, though it was late afternoon. Her face was fretful. Plainly she had not enjoyed a pleasant drive. She saw the beautiful candles that Judy brought from abroad and her purple eyes narrowed.

"But, Miss Rogers, I can't accept them!"

"I wish you would. After all, a candle is meant to shine, and they have to melt sometime. They are nicer than the blue."

Reluctantly the violet eyes widened. "Yes, they are better. But you'll have to let me pay for them."

"I couldn't do that. Let it be my contribution to the tea, please."

* * *

The wide eyes measured Judy—the slender, poised figure, the shining brown hair whose curls clustered at the nape of a white neck, steady brown eyes, tilted nose. They noticed the soft folds of green-gray velvet that made her long tea gown, and the Florentine cross and chain around her neck. Judy did not move.

Then Abbey smiled. It was a swift, radiant smile, as though the sun had broken through gray clouds.

"Thank you. I like them, too." When the wealthy girl had gone, Judy strolled to the nearest book shelves. "She decided that I'd serve her purpose better as an ally," she told herself. "Keep your mind on your work, Judy, my child. All you want is your salary. It won't be long. You're leaving when the contest ends—"

The contest! Maybe she wouldn't win. No, she wouldn't even think that. She had to win! She took a book.

Then she gasped. It wasn't a book. It was camouflage. An empty box, painted to represent a book, was in her hand. Quickly she reached to replace it. A low, mocking laugh sounded just beyond her. She whirled softly.

"I'm sorry I frightened you," the count's cool voice apoligized. "Finding an interesting book?"

Judy stood before the shelves, hands behind her, as though she guarded a mountain pass or a secret door.

"I was just waiting for the guests to come down."

"You've given me an idea. I should take some books upstairs," Count Phillippe chattered on. "There are new novels by the dozens but I prefer something that's stood the test of time. Do you like de Maupassant? Voltaire?"

He made some pertinent remarks about books and authors which caused Judy to look at him with new respect. He wasn't just a playboy. He couldn't be.

The talk drifted to poetry. He recited a few lines.

"They're beautiful," Judy exclaimed. "I don't know them. Who's the author?"

He didn't answer. The deep, musical voice went on with the poem, playing with the lyrical cadences.

"Where may I find it?" Judy asked softly.

"You can't, Miss Rogers. It's something of my own."

"You write poetry?"

"Now and then. A few have made the magazines abroad. And my book—" He shrugged. "It sold 239 copies. But it's a good book." His eyes twinkled. "The majority couldn't grasp it. The 150 copies left. They make nice gifts for a week-end hostess. I carry a few along. Maybe I'll present you with one."

"No one knows you write—I'm sorry—I mean I didn't know it."

"No need to qualify the sentence. Only a few have been told. I write under another name when I do it. It's been a long time, a year or so, since I've tried. You see, 239 copies are not conducive to a literary future."

* * *

The fire crackled. The sea cast forth its blues and greens and violets in the driftwood blaze. Dusk came quickly, and a maid drew the heavy velvet curtains which shut out the night and the long stretch of gray water. Guests began to come.

Judy forgot the count as she poured tea, asked about lemon and cream and sugar, said polite words and smiled polite smiles. She was disturbingly aware that the count's dark, amused eyes were on her face often. With almost a sense of guilt, she realized that she had not been watching for Ronald. Where was he? For that matter where was Abbey?

The grandfather clock, at a far end of the hall beyond, chimed once—waited 15 minutes and checked on the passing hour again. The count's interest no longer intrigued her. She wanted Ronald to come. The depth of her interest startled her.

"Steady, Judy Rogers," she whispered to herself. "Don't misread directions. He's being kind to you, that's all. And anyway, love is as thin as a snowflake. Pour tea, laugh, drop in two lumps, ask about lemon—don't be a fool!"

Reveals Electric Refrigeration Can Cut Grocery Bills

Tests in more than 2,000 homes have proved that nearly one-fourth of America's grocery bill can be saved by the use of modern refrigeration. From test kitchens throughout the world has come figures that show how electrical refrigeration may save each month more than $13 for the average family of four persons.

In the past two years more than 2,000 refrigerators have been placed in "test kitchens" by the merchandising division of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. These test kitchens were established in all parts of the world to get a true cross-section of household refrigeration conditions. All were installed with one objective in mind—to obtain operating figures. Meters, gauges, and recording apparatus were installed on every refrigerator. The amount of electricity used, the time that the machine was running, the temperatures both inside and outside the refrigerator, all were measured and recorded.

It was found that the average monthly food expenditure for a family of four was $54. Of this amount $10.88 could be saved by the use of electrical refrigeration.

This saving was made possible by the adequate storage and preservation facilities of the late model electric refrigerators. Correct temperature keeps the food longer thus eliminating waste, and ample storage space makes possible additional savings due to quantity buying.

An additional $2.40 was saved on operating expenses over previous methods of refrigeration. By the use of electrical refrigeration in the kitchen, a total of $13.28 per month or $159.36 each year could be saved by every housewife.

The Westinghouse test kitchens also furnished conclusive data to show that the cost of operating an electric refrigerator, in the average home, under normal conditions, was only 63 cents each month.

MISS ROSALEE HENNESS BRIDE OF SATURDAY

Exchanges Vows With Charles McMullen Before Altar of Central Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. J. A. Verburg Officiates.

WEARING a gown of ivory slipper satin made along princess lines Miss Rosalee Henness, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry V. Henness, 142 Stewart avenue, approached the altar of the Central Methodist Episcopal church Saturday at 4:30 p. m. on the arm of her father. The dress had a full train and closed down the back with tiny buttons from neck to waist.

The only adornment was a pair of pearl clips. Her veil was a two-tier silk net style four yards long and covered with tiny satin bows attached by pearlized orange blossoms. She carried a front style cascade of lilies-of-the-valley, gardenias, white roses and white pompons, and a rose point lace handkerchief which was carried by Mrs. Henness at her wedding.

Church Decorations.

Rev. James A. Verburg, Columbus read the ceremony before an altar decorated with palms, ferns, two seven-branch candelabra and baskets of white chrysanthemums and pompons. White satin ribbons fastened bouquets of white pompons to the pews, and the aisle was covered with muslin.

For the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Henness and Charles Martin McMullen, son of Mrs. Henry Hasenzahl, 122½ East Second street, the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Josephine Henness, Miss Winifred VanDereau, Miss Phyllis Underwood, Mrs. Clare Bell and Miss Birdella McMullen, sister of the groom.

Miss Henness, who was maid of honor, wore a dress patterned after her sisters and made in Aloha blue satin with a short train. She carried a flat front style bouquet of yellow button pompons and Talisman roses tied with Talisman satin ribbon.

Attendants' Costumes.

Mrs. Bell and Miss VanDereau wore gowns of Venetian rose satin in the princess style with wine velvet ribbon lacing the bodices. The gowns worn by Miss Underwood and Miss McMullen were similar to those of the other two attendants but in American Beauty rose satin. The first two carried flat front style bouquets composed of pink dot pompons and Lucille Hill roses. The others carried flat front style bouquets of pink dot pompons and Queen Mary roses.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Henness wore a formal afternoon dress of teal blue crepe with rose-berry accessories. She wore a corsage of Briercliff and Sweetheart roses tied with pink satin ribbon. Mrs. Hasenzahl wore a dress of wine chiffon velvet with matching accessories. Her corsage was made of Rapture roses and white pompons tied with white satin ribbon.

Frank McMullen, cousin of the bridegroom, served as best man, and the ushers were Robert Finical, Clare Bell, Robert Hartman, Bernard Mahoney, Raymond Friday and John Chatlain.

Miss Eleanor Clingan, sorority sister of the bride, was the organist and played "Romance" by Faulkes, "Russian Romance" by Friml and "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice" by Lemare. The soloist was Miss Jane Weuthrick who sang "Oh, Promise Me" by Kanen and "I Love You Truly" by Carrie Jacobs Bond.

Tea Follows.

After a tea held at the Women's Club, Mr. and Mrs. McMullen left for a short wedding trip. Mrs. John Wormhroudt, Ottumwa, Ia., aunt of the bride and Miss Mary McMullen, aunt of the bridegroom, poured. Mrs. McMullen wore a brown wool costume suit with lynx trim down the front with matching accessories for the trip. Her corsage was made of bronze chrysanthemums and matching ribbon. They will be at home later this month at 54½ Sturges avenue.

The bride, who is a graduate of Mansfield Senior high school, was a member of Gamma Gamma Gamma sorority. Mr. McMullen, who is employed at the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company, is also a graduate of the high school.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Anna Crips and John Chatlain, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Ernest Webster, Athens; Mrs. William Daisley, Findlay; Mrs. N. A. Hull, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

It is made of beige, suede-finished, knitted cotton and covered with dizzy little felt figures — shag-dancers, camels, keys, spades, hearts, anchors and stars. The figures, which come in a variety of colors, are gummed on the back and can be applied with a hot iron to suit the wearer's taste. They are said to stick even when the jacket is dry-cleaned.
